Pro-Western Laos Reports Invasion by Communist Force

But Diplomats, Military Men Have No Confirmation; Note Skepticism

VIENTIANE, Laos (AP) — The pro-Western government of Laos reported today that Communist troops have invaded the country from North Viet Nam. Western diplomats and military men had no information to confirm the report and some were inclined toward skepticism. The Communists denied such an invasion.

The invasion report came from the office of Premier Prince Boun Oum, who took over the government in Vientiane from pro-Communist rebels after a bloody battle for the capital in mid-December.

The government said it reserves the right to ask for help from friendly nations. This presumably would include the United States, which has supported the Southeast Asian kingdom with millions in financial and military aid, and other nations of the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization (SEATO).

Seven Battalions

The government said the invasion force numbered seven North Vietnamese battalions, supported by artillery. They were reported attacking the town of Nonget in the mountainous second military region bordering North Viet Nam. Nonget lies about five miles from the border and has uncertain road and telegraphic contact with the capital, about 150 miles to the southwest.

The communique said a wounded red soldier was captured and taken to a Vientiane hospital.

The situation recalled a similar charge in April, 1959, by another

Negro Appointed Chief of Housing

Robert Weaver Kennedy's Choice; Harriman Given Diplomatic Post

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP — President-elect John F. Kennedy today gave to a Negro crusader for civil rights, Robert C. Weaver of New York, the high-level job of directing the federal housing and home finance agency.

The appointment of Weaver to the topmost position ever held by a Negro in the executive branch of the government was announced by Kennedy at a news conference. Weaver was at his side on the sun-bathed patio of the Kennedy home.

Weaver, 51, now is vice chairman of New York City's housing and redevelopment board. Long a civil rights champion, he is chairman of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. He has a doctor of philosophy degree from Harvard.

Selection of Weaver became known Friday night after the president-elect had chosen W. Averell Harriman, former envoy to the Soviet Union and former governor of New York, to serve as his roving ambassador on important special missions abroad.

Kennedy said the overseas assignments he has in mind for Harriman will be carried out by a man "who has the full confidence of the president and an intimate knowledge of all aspects of United States policy."

Weaver arrived in Palm Beach Friday night for a meeting with the president-elect at the Kennedy seaside home in advance of today's news conference. He told newsmen he was sounded out earlier in the week about his availability for housing post, and later got word he had been confirmed for the job.

Trained At Harvard

Norman P. Mason is administrator of the Housing and Home Finance Agency in the outgoing Eisenhower administration. The agency has policy supervision over the operations of the Federal Housing Administration, the Public Housing Administration, and the Federal National Mortgage Association.

Weaver was trained as an economist at Harvard. He was a New Deal brain truster in the Franklin D. Roosevelt administration in 1935, serving first as an aide to Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes. Later he was a special assistant in such agencies as the Housing Division of the Works Progress Administration, the National Defense Advisory Commission, the War Production Board and the War Manpower Commission.

Another Nuclear Sub 'War-Ready'

CHARLESTON S. C. (AP)—The nuclear-powered and nuclear-armed submarine Patrick Henry is sliding silently beneath the surface of the Atlantic Ocean today, ready to launch her powerful Polaris missiles at any aggressor.

The big sub was sent to sea on a war-ready basis Friday, joining her sister sub, the George Washington, and doubling this nation's striking power from undersea launching sites.

Special Gifts For Parents of First '61 Baby

Readers will find two special pages in tonight's Post-Crescent listing many gifts for the first baby born in 1961 to Appleton and Neenah-Menasha parents. Featured in the page for Neenah-Menasha is the first baby born in 1960. Highlighted in the Appleton page is the first baby of the year born back in 1957.

A child has long been the symbol for the new year, and the merchants participating in this promotion use it as one way of saying Happy New Year to all their customers and friends. The Post-Crescent is happy to join in this wish.

Ruth Ann Schultz, 19, route 1, Neenah.

William Tiffany, 22, 205 Second St., Menasha.

Man Says Wife Killed In Michigan Ambush

MENOMINEE, Mich. (AP) A young Milwaukee man—wounded in the shoulder though apparently unaware of it—brought the bullet-pierced body of his wife to a Menominee hospital early today and told authorities they were ambushed while motoring to Escanaba for a holiday visit.

Mrs. Mary Jane Degnan, 21, was pronounced dead on arrival at St. Joseph-Lloyd Hospital. She had been shot, apparently with a .38 caliber pistol behind the left ear. The bullet lodged in the cheek.

Hit In Shoulder

Her husband, Robert, 23, of Milwaukee, had a bullet wound in the left shoulder. Hospital attendants discovered the wound as they prepared to treat him for shock.

The Degnans had been married only four months. Both are from Escanaba although they had been residing in Milwaukee. Mrs. Degnan's father is Michigan state plumbing inspector.

Degnan's story, as related to Sheriff Ed Reindl, was as follows:

His wife was driving and he was dozing in the back seat. Degnan felt the car slow down about a mile and a half north of Menominee on U.S. Highway 41. He woke up just as the car stopped, and he saw another car ahead of them.

Slumped Over

A large man about six feet tall and wearing a red jacket approached the car from his wife's side. His wife rolled down the window and the stranger told them there had been an accident up ahead. Robert started to crawl over the front seat and as he did so heard what he thought was a firecracker. He felt himself falling, then noticed his wife slumped over in the seat. The stranger started to run away.

The man got into an old model car and fled. Degnan drove to the hospital in Menominee.

Courts Bar Eviction of Sharecroppers

SOMERVILLE, Tenn. (AP — Some 700 Negro sharecroppers in this rural area relaxed today behind a shield of temporary federal court orders barring their eviction.

The Justice Department won the preliminary victory in its historic first test of a section of the 1957 Civil Rights Act which bars intimidation or coercion of potential voters.

Negro leaders here in Fayette County and in adjoining Haywood hailed the two court rulings with delight but cautiously declined to predict the future.

The big legal tests are yet to come. The government has civil suits against landowners, merchants and bankers in both counties charging organized economic pressure against Negroes who register to vote.

Cuba Voices Invasion Scare As Castro's Troubles Grow

Claim Marines Will Land Before Jan. 18; Peru Recalls Diplomat

HAVANA (AP) — The government press in Cuba today published a new charge that United States Marines will invade Cuba soon. Two newspapers said Prime Minister Fidel Castro's regime has been informed the Marines will land before Jan. 18 on orders of the outgoing Eisenhower administration.

In similar stories, the semiofficial Revolucion and the government controlled El Mundo said the Marines would be committed by President Eisenhower, the Central Intelligence Agency and the Pentagon to present incoming President John F. Kennedy a war he would have to follow through.

Foreign Minister Raul Roa was reported to have left Havana to denounce the alleged invasion plot before the United Nations in New York.

Invasion Scare

The invasion scare appeared to derive principally from a report by the Cuban government's news agency quoting "well informed sources" in the Uruguayan capital of Montevideo. The dispatch said the United States had sent a secret message to Latin American governments advising that the United States plans to intervene in Cuba to stop the reported building of missile launching sites in the island republic.

There was no immediate comment from Washington on the invasion stories.

Coinciding with the reports, the Cuban cabinet suspended regulations that long have allowed American tourists to enter Cuba easily.

Cuba's diplomatic relations also grew worse elsewhere in the hemisphere. Peru broke off relations with Prime Minister Fidel Castro's government last night.

Diplomats said the move may trigger a mass move by other Latin American governments to isolate Castro.

Growing Anger

Growing anger among leaders of hemispheric neighbors was evident over the activities of Cuban agents charged with spreading revolutionary propaganda among the masses.

Uruguayan President Benito Marrone told an interviewer Friday night that his government may expel the Cuban ambassador in Montevideo and cut all ties with Havana.

Then the Rebirth

Time Dies for Instant At Midnight Tonight

By JOHN O.B. WALLACE

NEW YORK (AP)—Late tonight the hands of the clock will merge precisely. Midnight.

Time, as measured by men, will die for a flashing instant. And instantly it will be reborn.

The year 1960 ends. 1961 begins.

But time, in this brief void, cannot be measured by man as he would measure a meadow — in rods. Nor as he would measure an ocean—in miles.

Time, in this instant, is a heartbeat and can be found in the hearts of men—some heavy with anguish, some light with hope.

Pope John

Pope John XXIII, at his special New Year's audience for diplomats, spoke of the anxiety in his heart.

But he also said he was searching on the dawn of this new year "to find in the uncertainty of an agitated world, some glimmer promising serenity."

As the 79-year-old head of the Roman Catholic Church spoke, there was anguish and strife on three continents.

Despite the "little black spots disturbing the harmony," the pontiff said he hoped that would be a year [illegible] between heaven and earth."

As the [illegible] came to a close [illegible] continents of Europe, Asia and Africa.

In Asia it was the [illegible] in Laos.

In Europe it was rioting in Belgium.

In Africa it was war between opposing factions in the Congo and racial tension further to the south.

Trouble Spots

So on the first day of the new year, the head of the world's peace organization, United Nations Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjold, will be flying to some of these trouble spots, seeking peace.

Hammarskjold will talk with Congo President Joseph Kasavubu in an effort to avoid possible civil war between followers of Kasavubu and his leading rival, Patrice Lumumba, former Congolese premier now imprisoned by Kasavubu's army.

Hold First Session Of Meeting Branded By FBI as Communist

CHICAGO (AP) — Delegates from throughout the country held the first of three weekend sessions in a neighborhood meeting hall last night in what has been branded by the FBI as a communist-directed youth movement.

Flashing credentials at a guarded door, the delegates—most of them under 30—gathered at an unassuming hall above a bowling alley on the Northwest side. Estimates of the number attending ranged from 30 to 75. Newsmen were barred.

West Germans Sign Pact With Russia

Trade Agreement Leaves Unchanged Berlin's Status

BONN, Germany (AP) — West Germany signed a new trade agreement with the Soviet Union today that leaves unchanged the economic status quo of West Berlin.

West Berlin was not specifically mentioned in the treaty. But deputy foreign minister Hilger Van Scherpenberg gave Soviet ambassador Andrei Smirnov a statement saying the new trade agreement's area of application will be the same as that of the present one," which expires at midnight.

Smirnov's acceptance of the statement indicated the unofficial tolerance shown by the Soviet Union toward West Berlin being treated as part of the economy of West Germany will continue under the new three-year agreement.

This much of a guarantee on West Berlin was less than the West German government previously sought. At the first scheduled signing ceremony on Dec. 12 the Soviet Union balked at accepting a stronger statement.

Multiple fatalities, including seven in one accident, gave a grim boost to the number of traffic deaths in the early hours of the long New Year's weekend.

A young mother and her two babies were among the seven persons killed in a shattering two-car crash on a rain-slicked highway near Almagorda, N.M. Two other persons were critically injured.

In other multiple fatalities, three young persons died in a two-car crash in Wisconsin and two sisters were killed in an accident near Bethesda, Md.

Wisconsin Toll

In addition to Wisconsin's three holiday deaths, six other fatalities were reported Friday to raise the year's toll to 913 compared with 821 on this day last year.

In all, 43 persons were killed on the nation's highways since the count began at 6 p.m. Friday. Five others died in fires, and two in miscellaneous accidents for a total of 51. The 78-hour holiday period extends until midnight Monday.

The National Safety Council estimated 340 persons might be killed during the period and safety campaigners pleaded for caution by travelers and holiday revelers.

The weather added a forboding note for many sections of the country with forecasts of snow or freezing rain or drizzle.

During a similar three-day period over the Christmas holiday, 488 deaths were counted in traffic accidents.

Record Number

Just a year ago, a record number of deaths for a three-day New Year's weekend were counted with 374 in traffic, 63 in fires and 76 in miscellaneous accidents for a total of 513.

In Wisconsin eight persons died during the New Year Holiday last year.

Accidents which occurred prior to 6 p.m. Friday included:

3 Die in Crash

Robert Briscoe, 32, Portage, the driver; Aaron Tatu, 45, rural Camp Douglas, and John Gilbert, 40, Rio, were killed Friday when their automobile went out of control on Highway 73 about 12 miles east of Madison, crossed the highway, glanced off a tree and struck a utility pole. The fourth man in the car, Robert Larsen, also of Camp Douglas was treated at a hospital and released.

Mrs. William Bohl, about 50, of Sparta, was killed Friday in a two-car crash on Highway 71 about five miles southeast of Sparta. Authorities said bales of hay apparently fell from a truck and were hit by one of the automobiles and caused it to go out of control. Five other persons were injured.

Wayne R. Schmidt, 27, rural Beaver Dam, was killed Friday when his car was struck by a Chicago and North Western Railway passenger train at Lowell in Dodge County. He was alone in the car. The train was delayed for about an hour.

Mrs. Harold Wilson, 39, of Waldwick in Iowa County, was killed Friday when a car she was driving and a truck collided at the intersection of two town roads near Waldwick.

Nelson Aide May be Offered Federal Post

Agricultural Advisor Asked to Confer With Gov. Orville Freeman

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON—Robert E. Lewis of Gov. Nelson's executive office staff, a product of a Wisconsin farm and widely known among Wisconsin farmers, is expected to be offered a high ranking administrative office in the U. S. Department of Agriculture under the new Democratic national administration.

Lewis has been asked to call on Gov. Orville Freeman of Minnesota, recently named by President-Elect John F. Kennedy to be the new secretary of agriculture in his cabinet.

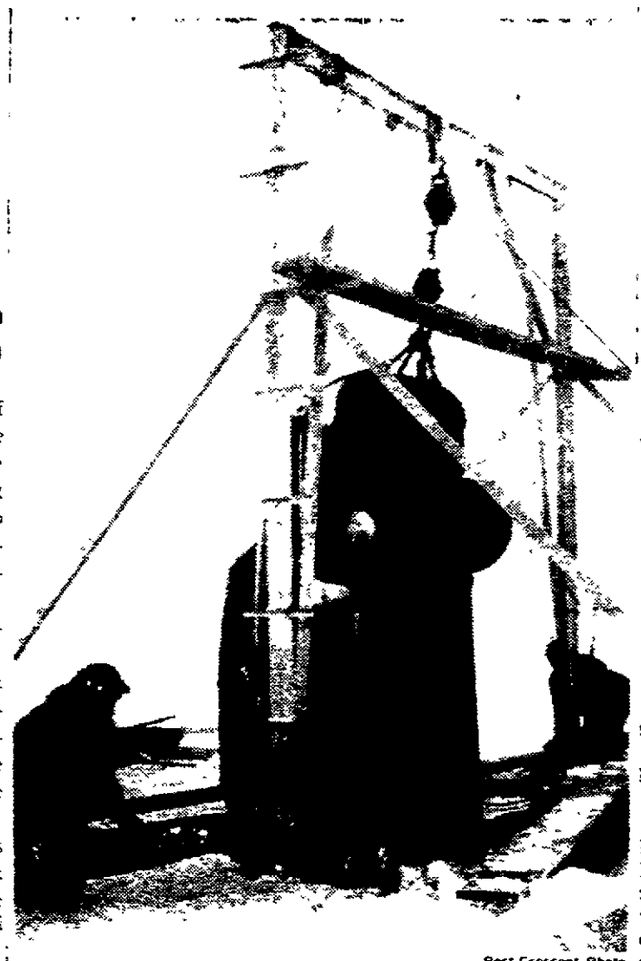

His associates believe Lewis would like to be appointed an undersecretary in charge of the federal government's agricultural price supports program.

Good Connections

Lewis has good connections in the new administration. During the fall campaign he worked in the natural Kennedy headquarters, in direct contact with Robert Kennedy, the president-elect's campaign manager. His assignment was to direct the campaign for farm votes.

A native of Trempealeau County, where he grew up on a farm, Lewis has been active in political affairs since he finished the University of Wisconsin. He has been employed by the Wisconsin Electric Cooperative, the National Farmers' Union and as an assistant in the Washington office of Sen. Proxmire. When Nelson was elected two years ago he named Lewis his principal agricultural assistant. In the 1959 legislature Lewis was in the middle of the fight about the Nelson farm marketing bill, finally killed by the law-makers. Lewis was the chief author of the bill, which Nelson is expected to push again in the 1961 legislative session.

Lewis is the husband of the former Martha Wells, who grew up in Combined Locks.

Davey Jones Locker. Lake Winnebago Branch, Friday lost one of the several cars unlucky ice fishermen have plunged through the ice. Being hoisted from the water by the Ecker's Service crew here is Leo Zimmer's car that went in off Quinney about two weeks ago. Observers agree it is more difficult to retrieve a car than it is to sink it.

Davey Jones Loses Car Sunk in Lake

Hoisting Vehicle From Water Demands Special Equipment, Good Team Work

BY DON KAMPFER
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

CHILTON—A prized possession has been wrested from the Lake Winnebago branch of the Davey Jones Locker Co., Inc., but it still claims several others.

Friday, a 4-man crew representing Ecker's Service, worked for about 3½ hours to raise a 1951 auto which broke through the ice about two weeks ago.

Lawen with three Manitowoc fishermen and driven by Leo Zimmer of that city, the car hit intersecting cracks in the ice about one-half mile off shore and just north of Quinney. The vehicle sank slowly permitting its occupants to scramble to safety without difficulty.

Difficult Task

Getting a sunken car back to the surface is a task far more difficult than sinking it.

The raising firm has constructed special equipment for the chore it faced Friday. It consists of an elevated steel cross-beam with supporting framework mounted on 35-foot long channel iron runners.

This straddles the hole cut over the sunken vehicle. Hooks, specially shaped to grasp a car bumper and attached to steel cables, are dropped into the water and swung gently until the car is hooked. The cables wind through a heavy duty block-and-tackle suspended from the elevated crossbeam. A wrecker winch slowly pulls the car toward the surface.

When the car is clearly visible, but still totally under water, it is rehooked more securely for the tense moment when it is pulled clear of the water and regains all the weight of the water it has displaced.

Water Pours Out

While pulling Zimmer's car out, the elevation process was stopped frequently while water poured from the interior and every cavity of the car body.

When completely out, the car is suspended vertically and looks not unlike the familiar photos of prize marlin or tuna taken on Florida fishing docks.

Extra precautions are taken to secure the vehicle then the sled-like device is pulled forward until the front of the car is over solid ice. The rear is slowly lowered and when the back wheels touch ice again the touchiest part of reclaiming a sunken car is completed but the costliest still lies ahead.

Zimmer's car, just as the owners did Dec. 28, plunged straight downward and balanced on its nose. Zimmer's later toppled over on its top.

The car's grille was packed with muck and gray mud it sank into but was not otherwise battered. The vehicle, in fact, except for a freak happening, would have sustained no serious exterior damage. The tight bodied little car sank with its doors and windows closed and what is believed to have been water pressure on the momentarily airtight car, crushed the top.

Instead of a slightly rounding roof, the car has a concave top with an almost perfectly uniform depression about one foot deep.

Need Speed

Once a car is pulled from the icy water, speed becomes an all-important factor in getting the vehicle to a warm garage. Water which has accumulated in the crank case, transmission housing and differential must be drained quickly before it freezes.

In the garage, these areas are drained and dried and the electrical and ignition system require special care and reconditioning. Mechanics and garagemen seem to be of the opinion that a car does not suffer serious mechanical damage from a dunking and believe one can be restored to good running order with a minimum of mechanical work.

Upholstery and paneling in the interior are another matter. In many cases, the side and top upholstery rips from shrinkage while drying. The foam rubber seats and back rests also require special care and speedy drying to prevent mildew.

Knight Plans Pakistan Trip For Conference

SEATO Meeting On Problems of Asian Universities

President Douglas M. Knight of Lawrence College is one of three Americans chosen to attend a South-East Asia Treaty Organization conference for Heads of universities in Karachi, Pakistan from Jan. 25 to Feb 1.

Knight

He will leave Appleton Jan. 23, and return the second week in February, after brief stops at Delhi, Hong Kong and Tokyo.

Other United States representatives are former President William E. Stevenson of Oberlin College, who has been chairman of the Middle East University Survey Commission; and Dr. Robert G. Van Duyn, chief of the education division, U. S. Operations Mission to Thailand, Bangkok.

The purpose of the conference, which will be attended by vice-chancellors, rectors or presidents of institutions, is to consider problems affecting universities in South-East Asia. Host for the conference is the University of Karachi.

Meeting in Bangkok

The opening session will consist of a robed academic procession, the reading of the Koran, speeches of welcome by Field Marshall Mohammed Ayub Kahn, the President of Pakistan; and the director of the conference, Dr. B. A. Hasmi, an address by the SEATO Secretary-General, Pote Sarasin; and an oration on "The Role of the University in Modern Society" by Jose Y. Tuazon, undersecretary for education, the government of the Philippines. English will be the working language for the conference, with simultaneous translation into French.

A preliminary meeting for the conference was held in Bangkok a year ago, when leaders from the eight SEATO nations — the United Kingdom, France, the United States, Pakistan, Australia, Thailand, New Zealand and the Philippines — drew up the agenda.

In addition to the member nations, guests have been invited from Burma, Cambodia, Ceylon, India, Indonesia, Laos, Malaya, Singapore and South Vietnam.

Will Circle Globe

President Knight has been invited to deliver a series of lectures at the India International Center in New Delhi on his return trip, but since his Indian stop-over is only a day in duration, he has been obliged to refuse.

Among the problems to be discussed at the conference will be the international exchange of teachers, students and scholarly materials; Asian Studies in university curricula; entrance requirements and overcrowding in SEATO schools; recognition of periods of study in foreign university and equivalence of degrees or diplomas; placement of graduates; organization of studies, responsibility of universities in furnishing leaders; and educational assistance.

President Knight will circle the globe in the course of the trip, for his air route lies over Europe. His whimsical observation on the impending trip is: "The remarkable thing about the jet age is that I will be no further in hours from the Lawrence campus when I am in Karachi, than President Henry Wriston used to be when he had to take two trains for a meeting in New York City."

Water Commission To Purchase Pipe

The Appleton Water Commission Friday approved purchase of 600 feet of eight-inch underwater pipe to replace a section of pipe that crosses the Fox River south of the old John Street bridge.

Members said the pipe, which needed replacing, was further damaged during work on the old bridge that is now in use. The commission agreed that the work should be done this winter when the water is low.

The commission also received an award of merit for safety from the Wisconsin section of the American Water Works Association for department management and employes.

This Mass of Paper Products, 1,700 pounds in all, represents the yearly consumption of paper by a typical American family of four. In the last 60 years paper has multiplied more than seven times, from about 58 pounds per capita in 1899 to an estimated 425 pounds per person in 1959. Wisconsin produces more paper for the average American family than any other state, 10 per cent of all that is made in this country.

State Paper Industry's Progress

Past, Future Very Bright

This is the last in a series of articles on the paper-making industry in Wisconsin written by Thomas E. Brannagan, director of the Wisconsin Paper Industry Information Service.

BY THOMAS E. BRANNAGAN

Wisconsin leaped to the lead in the manufacture of this country's paper with an amazing display of energy and versatility in the post World War II years.

Culminating an uphill climb out of the near-disastrous days of 50 years ago, when the lifting of Canadian tariffs on newsprint threatened to knock out the paper industry in Wisconsin, state manufacturers burst all sales and production figures, relying largely on the so-called specialty paper products.

The decade of the '50s was a particularly outstanding period with Wisconsin paper employment almost doubling and production increasing by about 50 per cent.

Wisconsin now is the country's leading pulp and paper producing state, accounting for a tenth of the entire production of the United States. Further gains are forecast for the '60s, although the threat of foreign competition undoubtedly will be a problem and, obviously, growth of the industry in Wisconsin will depend to a great extent on the state of the national economy.

A recent report by the Wisconsin Paper Industry Information Service of Neenah noted:

Paper Tonnage

Production of pulp, paper and paperboard in Wisconsin amounted to more than 3½ million tons in 1959. This compares with a total of 3¼ million tons produced in the entire country last year.

Wisconsin mills began the '50s with an annual output of about 2,400,000 tons.

Wisconsin now outranks all other states among the 42 which produce paper. In addition to its lead in tonnage, Wisconsin mills lead in sales, approximately $850,000,000 annually; in state and national taxes paid, about $105,000,000 yearly; in capital investment, almost $900,000,000, and in annual wages, about $225,000,000.

As a yardstick to measure what this means to the state economy it might be pointed out that the $850,000,000 sales figure for paper in 1959 is much larger than that of Wisconsin's milk. The total sales figure for milk produced in Wisconsin in 1959 was $560,000,000.

The paper industry now employs approximately 4 and ½ persons throughout the state, about 9 per cent of Wisconsin's manufacturing payroll. The latest figure was about 2½ per cent. The weekly earnings of mill workers has almost doubled in the decade, from an average of $55 in 1950 to more than $100 in 1959, plus an estimated $20 to $25 per week per employe in various fringe benefits.

Dependent Industries

In addition, dependent industries such as lumber producing and the manufacture of paper machinery provide employment for thousands of other Wisconsin residents. There are an estimated 10,000 full- and part-time pulpwood producers in the state. One paper machinery manufacturer alone, the Beloit Iron Works, employs more than 2,800 persons. Wisconsin paper firms spend about $10,000,000 yearly for trucking and railroading services.

The industry uses about $15,000,000 of Wisconsin pulpwood annually, about half the total it consumes. It expects to be able to use more in the future as research develops more applications for hardwood fibers which are comparatively abundant in Wisconsin.

What about the future? The possibilities were summarized this way last spring by Dr. W. R. Haselton, vice president and general manager of The Rhinelander Paper Co. and general chairman of the Wisconsin Paper Industry Information Service, in a report to the members of the service.

"With the wide diversity of paper products produced in Wisconsin, virtually every type except newsprint, our local industry should be well prepared to fit into the patterns of life as they appear to be developing in the United States.

"There should be increased use in the coming decade of cultural papers of all kinds, including printing, educational, book and other fine papers.

"And technological developments promise to create a wide range of new uses for paper products, stemming from increased strength in papers and combining the techniques of paper with those of textiles and other materials."

Research should also serve to develop more ways of utilizing the other half of the tree, the cellulose material in wood that today is largely unused. Considerable headway already has been made in making use of these elements for such items as vanillin, yeast, human and animal nutrients, etc. Wisconsin firms are way ahead of the rest of the industry in producing these by-products for commercial use and are in a position of leadership in an area of great potential.

To Your Good Health

Eat Less, but Use Proteins To Lick Overweight Problems

BY JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M. D.

There's a story to be told by two readers' letters, and perhaps I can give you a useful tip about between-meal hunger. If you are on a reducing diet.

Dr. Molner

Anyway, one letter, from which I will quote only a sentence or so, is from "E. M. B.", who tells me she weighed 169 pounds, lost 12 of them, and is not satisfied that her weight is right for her height and bone structure.

She writes: "I didn't diet to lose weight. I just ate less."

When you learn to shed pounds that way by eating less you have achieved the best kind of weight-control. You have a method whereby you can keep your weight steady, or you can, if you choose, lose a few more pounds. You do not, as do so many, struggle to reduce and then find the pounds creeping right back as soon as you go off the reducing diet.

Second Letter

Now here's part of the other letter:

"I wonder if being at least 45 pounds overweight could have caused my trouble in childbirth. Since my first baby I have gained quite a bit of weight, and would like to go on a diet that will not hurt me and I won't feel hungry between meals.—Mrs. N. M."

Mrs. N. M. take a tip from E. M. B. Don't start on a special diet. Just learn to eat less.

That way there is no risk of getting into a diet that will be harmful.

It will take some will power. Enough will power to change the old pattern of eating too much. But it can be done.

Protein Foods

And this tip will help. Put the emphasis on protein foods to guard against between-meal hunger.

There is a sound reason for this. Sugars and other starches are used very rapidly by the system. They are absorbed quickly.

The proteins (lean meat, fish, seafood, cheese, eggs) are not absorbed as rapidly. It is necessary for the chemistry of digestion to put these proteins, or parts of them, through an extra process or so before the food can be burned up as energy.

Therefore, the proteins tend to stay with you longer because of the slower absorption. This can be genuinely helpful in avoiding that famished feeling between meals.

You may well have read about athletes sometimes taking up players who aren't very heavy, who nibble a lump or two of sugar between halves because the sugar, absorbing quickly, gives them a rapid boost in energy.

To avoid the between-meals hunger, you do the opposite. Instead of eating quick-absorbing foods you eat more of the slow ones, which will spread their supply of nutrition over a longer period.

X-Ray, Cardiograph

"Dear Dr. Molner: I have always understood that an X-ray of the heart was a picture of it and a cardiograph showed its movement or beat rhythm. Am I right—C. E."

Yes, you are. An X-ray shows the shape and size of the heart. A cardiogram by means of graph representing changes in the tiny electrical impulses in the heart shows the rhythm and timing between the various phases of a heartbeat. Certain peculiarities in the pattern can disclose damage from such things as a coronary thrombosis, heart attack, or rheumatic fever.

Needless Worry

Note to M.H.: No, you are worrying needlessly. Fibrocystic disease of the breast and cystic fibrosis of the pancreas have no relationship to each other.

EARACHE TIME

Each winter there are children who annually get earache. There is no use battling the suffering. The child has great pain, and many times quantities of ill smelling discharge come from the ear.

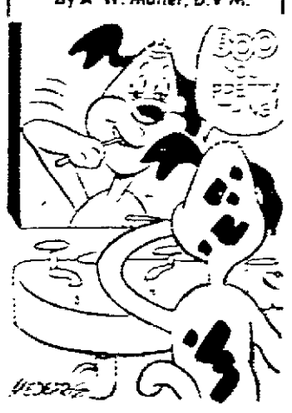

There is a definite interference to the nerve supply of the ear in these earaches, and a Chiropractor should be consulted at once.

Chiropractors have records where old chronic running of the ears have been successfully taken care of by adjustments alone and the terrible odor and discharge cleared up completely. So give your child a chance if earache does afflict him, at the first opportunity take your child to the Chiropractor and have a thorough examination made of his spine.

Alvin H. Otto, 59, route 1, Paynes Point, Neenah, was parked in the 400 block of W. College Ave. Friday afternoon when he decided to back out of the stall. He was too close to the adjacent car, so drove back into the parking stall to maneuver.

Three Drivers Convicted of Tipsy Driving

Two Say They'll Appeal Verdicts; Third Pays $150

Three drivers have been convicted of drunken driving, but two indicated they would file appeals.

Found guilty and fined $100 for drunken driving and $50 for leaving the scene of an accident was Melvin E. Zittlow, 44, route 2, Kaukauna. Kaukauna Justice of the Peace Anton Jansen also revoked Zittlow's driver's license for a year.

Zittlow was arrested Dec. 23 after his car sideswiped another on Madison Street in Kaukauna, fled the scene and was found by County Police Sgt. George Else when the car stalled in a rut on the shoulder of Buchanan Street.

Sentencing of Herbert Tenner, 55, 426A N. Main St., Oshkosh for drunken driving was put off until Wednesday by Oshkosh Municipal Judge Arnold J. Cane to allow Tenner's attorney to file an appeal. Tenner was arrested Sept. 27 on State Street in Oshkosh after he nearly caused an accident, police testified.

Richard E. Funk, 30, 1928 N. Appleton St., was given until Wednesday to file an appeal after he was convicted of drunken driving and fined $100 by Appleton Municipal Judge Oscar J. Schmiege. Funk was arrested Oct. 1 by Appleton police after they had earlier warned him not to drive. He was followed from Richmond Street to Wisconsin Avenue, then to N. Erb Street and police testified that he drove erratically.

Funk tested .24 on the drunkometer. A reading of .15 is considered evidence of intoxication.

GOP Assembly Chief's Organizing Delayed

Blanchard Stymied Because Democratic Minority Has Not Elected Its Leadership

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — The prospective Republican speaker of the 1961 state assembly said he is being delayed in his plans for organizing the lower house of the legislature.

Assemblyman David Blanchard, Edgerton, chosen recently at a pre-session Republican majority caucus to preside in the 1961 assembly, said he cannot nominate the principal Democrats for the usual minority seats on key committees because the minority's leadership assignments have not been made.

Given Choice

Democrats have not indicated whether they will meet before the legislature convenes to make their leadership selections. Traditionally minority party leaders are given the choice of committee assignments by the majority party.

Blanchard said his distribution of committee assignments, including chairmanships, among the 55 Republican majority members of his house has been virtually completed but that he intends to make no public disclosures of his choices until the house is formally convened Jan. 11 and he is sworn in for his new legislative term and formally installed in the speaker's chair.

Make Public

He said he probably will make his committee selections public on the following day, to permit immediate organization of the groups and to allow the scheduling of the first public hearings on bills in the legislature's third week.

That would be a more rapid schedule of activity in the legislature than has usually been attained.

The speaker has the sole responsibility for choosing the chairmen and the members of 24 standing committees as well as special and interim committees. In the senate the function is handled by a committee of majority party leaders.

Chinese Reds Try to Hide Farm Failure

By LEWIS GULICK

WASHINGTON AP — American experts believe Red China is trying to cover up mismanagement of its agriculture by claiming the worst weather in 100 years ruined much of the 1960 crops.

At the same time that the Chinese Communists have kept countless millions hungry under strict rationing, they have been sending sizable exports of food to the outside world, State Department analysts said Friday.

The Red shipments include large amounts to places like Cuba and Guinea where the aim is to promote communism, not economically sensible trade.

Peiping radio says wind, pests and a drought that almost dried up the great Yellow River in 1960 affected 150 million acres of farmland, half of Communist China's total cultivated acreage.

U. S. authorities estimate that actually, the Reds' 1960 harvest roughly equaled that of the year before and was close to average. They admit China suffered some natural disasters, but doubt they were of the size proclaimed by Red propagandists.

They think the Peiping regime perhaps is trying to set the stage for another revision of its farm statistics.

Past Communist Chinese agricultural figures have proved phony on their face.

J. D. Zellerbach Says It Cost $200,000 to Be Italian Ambassador

SAN FRANCISCO AP — J. D. Zellerbach, just returned to his home in San Francisco, says it cost him $200,000 to serve as ambassador to Italy for four years.

The paper tycoon, chairman of the board of Crown-Zellerbach Corp., said he could afford it but many of our most able career people simply can't afford the job.

He told a reporter yesterday that when he and his wife went to Rome in 1957 to succeed Clare Booth Luce they found their official residence, the Villa Taverna, in near-crumbling condition.

He said he spent a sizable chunk of his own money to refurbish the villa and added that the steady procession of official parties he was required to host cost him some $70,000 a year over his salary and entertainment allowances.

In regard to President-elect Kennedy's intentions to increase entertainment allowances for ambassadors, Zellerbach commented:

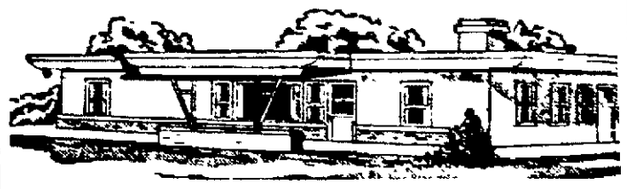

"I'll be glad when congress appropriates the money."

year to 26. This is 10 more than the number of fatalities last year and the highest since the 1953 total of 30.

6 Killed in Week

This month Winnebago County has counted seven traffic deaths, six of them in the last eight days.

Winnebago County Policeman Edward Misch said it seemed the two girls were headed east toward Neenah with the Spiegelberg girl probably driving since it was her father's car. Tiffany was alone in his car which was believed to be headed west.

The left front of each car struck headon in the westbound lane, it appeared from evidence at the scene. The accident happened right at the curve where the Pendleton Road intersects from the north.

The highway at this point is 18 feet wide and is zoned for a 40 mile per hour speed in that area.

Friday night's triple fatality occurred at the same curve where on Thursday night of last week a 19-year-old Menasha youth, Gary White, was killed when his car went out of control and overturned in the field.

Seek Third Girl

A report that a third girl was in the accident sent county police back to the accident scene early this morning. Investigation revealed that the third girl had been with the Misses Spiegelberg and Schultz at a bowling alley earlier in the evening but had left the group prior to the accident.

William Tiffany

Ruth Ann Schultz

William Tiffany was born July 11, 1938 in Tomahawk and had lived in the Twin Cities the last five years, graduating from Menasha High School in 1956. He was employed at Gunderson Cleaners.

Funeral services will be at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday at the Bill Nick Funeral Home, Tomahawk.

Survivors are his father, a brother, four sisters and a grandfather.

Miss Schultz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Royden Schultz, route 1, Neenah, was born May 8, 1941 in Neenah. She was a 1959 graduate of Neenah High School and was employed by Gilbert Paper Co.

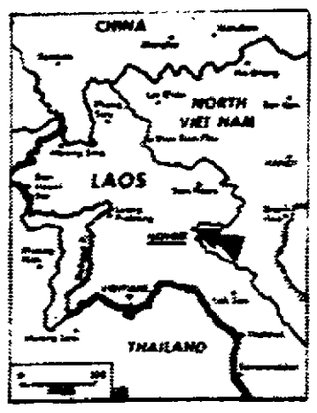

Funeral services will be at 3 p.m. Tuesday at the Kessler Funeral Home with the Rev. William C. F. Hayes, pastor of the First Evangelical United Brethren Church in charge. Burial will be in Oak Hill Cemetery.

Survivors are her parents, three sisters and maternal and paternal grandmothers.

Miss Spiegelberg was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Willard Spiegelberg, route 2, Neenah. She was born May 12, 1941 in Appleton and graduated from Neenah High School in 1959. She was employed by the Wisconsin Paper Group.

Funeral services will be at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday at Martin Lutheran Church with burial in Highland Memorial Park, Appleton.

She is survived by her parents, her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Spiegelberg, route 1, Larsen, and Mrs. Emma Mader, route 2, Neenah, and a brother.

Friendship and Integrity . . .

Our calendars soon will have new faces . . . the old will be discarded as we look to the weeks and months of the new year with optimism.

Of all the things which we will take from the "old year" into the new, one of the most precious . . . one that we should never permit to become tarnished or considered "out-of-date" is FRIENDSHIP. We further take note that a deliberate effort must be made to support that close ally of friendship — INTEGRITY. With these thoughts in mind we smilingly offer our greetings to one and all . . . The New Year

Mankind, bounded so firmly by Time, cannot help but feel emotionally the end of a year and the beginning of another. "No one ever regarded the first of January with indifference," wrote Charles Lamb. "Of all sound of bells most solemn and touching is the peal which rings out the old year."

New Year's Eve is a time for recollection and remembrance — of the joys of the year that is ending, the dear friends who have left, the new ones who have arrived, perhaps a triumph or two, some sorrows, certainly the mistakes. It is a time to close a door — but not too tightly — and to watch eagerly as a new one opens.

For New Year's Day offers everyone some sort of a chance to begin again, influenced and led and cautioned by the past. To some there is optimism that the errors will be avoided this time, that hopes will be realized, dedications discovered. To others there may be dread at what 1961 will bring and concern over our ability to cope with the problems. But no one can really avoid meditating about the New Year for we must always count the minutes and the days and especially the years that make up the time we have.

If we had a prayer for the New Year we might ask to find ourselves, as individuals, as a nation, so as to recognize the tasks and the dangers, the limitations and the visions, the trivia and the challenges. For this we might ask, with Louis Untermeyer's Caliban — "Lord . . . fling us a handful of stars!"

Urban Renewal and the Mall Plan

Willard Downing, executive director of the Urban Renewal Authority of Milwaukee, has some interesting thoughts which should hold the attention of every city dweller.

These people, seeing large areas of blighted sections of the city leveled clear to provide the way for new modern housing, probably ask themselves how they benefit from that work. Obviously only a few people will occupy the new housing and perhaps it will appear to most city dwellers that those people are getting a free ride at the expense of other taxpayers. In answer to this question Downing presented a picture of renewal development formed by the city of Milwaukee in its Third ward. Some 32 acres of land in that ward were cleared of dismal wreckage of old buildings which made a slum area. The entire 12 blocks was paying to the city only $55,000 in taxes. After the land was cleared and the restoration work performed a single block was able to return to the city $120,000 in taxes.

A large part of the money for this work doubtless was supplied by the federal government. Nevertheless the taxpayers of Milwaukee were required to make a contribution and some who may have complained about being taxed to clear this slum area and provide homes for someone else now are benefiting by about $70,000 a year in their tax program. This is more than likely sufficient to pay interest on the original investment and to retire the cost.

The same question arises in other cities when people consider the possibilities of a mall plan. This is not a restoration plan but rather a proposal to prevent the deterioration of the downtown district and to encourage private owners to invest in it. Nevertheless, many taxpayers oppose the plan on the ground that they will be taxed to put it into effect. However, it is easy to see this plan to prevent deterioration offers the same benefits to the taxpayer at a much smaller cost than the restoration programs which are being carried on in many cities.

The deterioration of the downtown business section of American cities usually is caused by traffic congestion. The traffic becomes so heavy that full business use of property is prevented. Businessmen tend to seek other locations. The effect on the city treasury is the same as that caused by loss of revenue in slum areas. However, the protection of the downtown area is much less expensive and more profitable than any restoration program could be.

Nevertheless, Mr. Downing says that the benefits of restoration are so great that a city could afford to give away the land it cleared knowing full well that within a few years the entire cost would be returned, plus dividends, through property tax payments.

Such drastic action is not required in most instances and nothing even approaching it is suggested by mall plans. Nevertheless, the benefits from such planning could be much greater than any that could possibly be perceived from a restoration program in a slum area.

What About Holes-in-One?

A Republican senator has warned that a ban on photographs of President-Elect John Kennedy playing golf indicates that the Democrats are going to clamp a secrecy lid upon White House and governmental activities. Obviously this endangers the public's Right to Know.

The years of cartoons, sniffs, jokes and complaints about the time President Eisenhower spent on the links, the controversy over the White House putting green and the inconvenience to Washington squirrels apparently has prompted the ban. But the foolishness of the order is that most people recognize that the president needs relaxation and the unpredictable passage of a golf ball is one way to take the mind off the whims of Congress and the whoops of Khrushchev.

It Maketh Glad Anyway

A few years ago the French were almost ready to withdraw from NATO because American soft drinks had invaded the land. At the same time there was trouble at home from a premier who publicly drank milk and a drive by the government to curb alcoholism especially among children who carried bottles of wine with their school lunches.

But the opposition fought back. This year the World Gastronomic Congress held its first meeting in Paris and awarded prizes for slogans in defense of wine.

There was some worry about the charges of alcoholism and the third prize slogan firmly said "No to alcoholism, yes to our fine French wines." Another went even further in that "the greatest enemy of alcoholism is wine." There was the appeal to national honor — "to disparage wine is to disparage France!" Another fell back on tradition — "if it were harmful, wine could not have lasted 3,000 years." But the greatest emphasis was on the theory that "to love wine is to love life." And the first prize winner — of one hundred bottles of fine wine naturally — simply said that "a wineless meal is a sad meal," which sounds more euphonious in French than in English.

One thing is sure about the World Gastronomic Congress. From apertif to champagne, truffled pheasant pate to crepes, it was the best wined and dined convention in the world.

The Best From AMERICAN HERITAGE

First to Cross the Continent

BY MORTON M. HUNT

Eleven years before Lewis and Clark set out on their famous expedition, the man who would first conquer the continent was already on the last lap of his trip, paddling up an unknown river in western Canada 2,000 miles beyond the frontiers of civilization.

He was Alexander Mackenzie, a 30-year-old Scotsman in the fur trade. Mackenzie was attempting to breach the fabled Rockies, thread his way through the unknown rivers, chasms and forests of the West, and slip unharmed through more than 600 miles of savage-infested wilderness.

By a strange quirk of fate, Alexander Mackenzie is remembered for a failure. Yet he was the first man to cross the North American continent.

Ostensibly, profit was his motive; a man could become rich in a decade of fur trading if he survived it and if he kept bringing in the pelts. But there was more to it than potential profit. For, once the idea seized him of being the first man to complete the crossing of the continent, it would not let him go.

First Effort Failure

In 1789, Mackenzie finally launched himself and a small party of canoemen on a broad river that flowed west from Great Slave Lake, hoping it would carry him to the Pacific. Fifteen hundred miles later, he and his men found themselves canoeing along the shores of the Arctic Ocean, with the huge bulk of Alaska still between them and the Pacific.

Bitterly disappointed, he returned to his trading post in central Canada, but the dream would not leave him in peace. In 1791 he made the long, hard trip back to Montreal, and thence to London, where he studied astronomy and navigation until he felt ready. The next year he came back to Canada and journeyed again to the trading regions, finally pushing hundreds of miles beyond the last of them to build himself a new outpost in which to pass the winter — Fork Fort on the Peace River in what is now northern Alberta. In the spring he readied his supplies, and on May 9, 1793, he and nine men—one Scotsman, six French-Canadians, and two Indians hunters — pushed off to conquer the Rocky Mountains in a canoe.

At first the trip went smoothly. For eight days the men proceeded up the Peace River into the foothills of the Rockies. Then, on May 17, they could for the first time see the faint snow-capped peaks of the Rockies.

Narrow Escape

Soon afterward their troubles began. In the Peace River Canyon, they had to fight for every yard against the rushing water, with the fragile canoe creaking and lurching. Their goods got soaked, had to be dried in the sun, were repacked and got soaked again.

The next day was even worse. They reached a spot from which they could see nothing ahead but rapids. There was a narrow beach of broken rock fragments just wide enough to tow the bouncing canoe along. Then suddenly one extra-violent wave broke over the bow and snapped the towline.

Mackenzie watched horrified as his only means of transportation — and the men in the boat — were swept backwards toward destruction. But another freakish wave washed the canoe, unscratched, within a few feet of the bank.

Several men spoke out plainly, saying it was impossible to proceed. Mackenzie ignored all this and brusquely ordered the most outspoken of the men to find a way up the side of the canyon to locate a suitable camp site for the night. He went off to reconnoiter.

Canyon Impassable

The canyon ahead, Mackenzie learned, was absolutely impassable He could think of no alternative except to carry the 25-foot canoe and its ton and a half of goods over the mountain, rejoining the river on the other side.

At daybreak they began one of the most outlandish jobs of portaging in the annals of exploration. They began felling trees, dropping them parallel to the path, not completely severed from the stumps, to make a crude railing Bit by bit they brought everything up from the river as far as the camp site, and then went back for the canoe.

The next day the ascent became less rugged. But the ground was a succession of hills and defiles, and the woods gave way to thorny briar which was terrible to clear away.

By four the next afternoon, they saw the river before them, calm, wide and placid. The mountain portage had brought them out just above the beginning of the Peace River Canyon and had pierced the first great ridge of mountains leading them into the heart of the Rockies.

On May 31 they arrived at a fork, and Mackenzie decided to take the southeast fork which was the Parsnip River, basing his decision on the advice of an old Indian given months before.

Canoe Ripped Open

In the following days Mackenzie knew many hours of despair. The Parsnip, now at flood, was difficult. The canoe ripped open, but was patched. Only Mackenzie's continually varied techniques of handling his men kept them on their way.

Already he had come nearly 400 roundabout miles and used up one month of the short-lived summer: if he did not find the legendary portage of which the old Indian had spoken, all would be in vain. Then on the afternoon of June 9 he smelled smoke and heard people rushing about. They turned out to be a little band of rather scraggly Indians, who were more frightened than bellicose

They told Mackenzie that they knew of no river which emptied into the "Stinking Lake" the Indians' name for the Pacific . But he learned that one of them did know of a west-flowing river. He supposed the native had never followed it to the Pacific

With one of the Indians as a guide, they pushed off again, working their way up streams till they reached a tiny lake. After portaging their supplies, they began the frightfully difficult descent Finally they arrived at a wide, navigable river, later named the Fraser.

Overland March

From Indians, first hostile, then friendly, he heard adverse reports of the river, repeated with discouraging frequency as he continued downstream The Carrier Indians told him that the Fraser was not only wild and impassable, but that warlike tribes would certainly annihilate his little band In any event the river was said to be too slow a route for Mackenzie's diminished supplies

He decided to strike off overland and and walk toward the Pacific Before quitting the river, Mackenzie spent several days having his men build a complete new canoe and cached it and some food for their return.

On July 4 they struck off on foot with an Indian guide.

For the next two weeks they struggled westward, laboring up and down the mountain slopes with 90 pound packs of food and gear on their backs. Gradually they descended into the luxuriant forests of the Pacific coastal slope, guided by a succession of braves who led them from one tribal village to another. .

Borrows Canoe

After nearly two weeks they reached a river called the Bella Coola by the local Indians. From this friendly people Mackenzie was able to borrow a canoe and several braves. On July 19 he came upon a village from which he could see the river emptying in the distance into a narrow, blue-green arm of the sea.

Though the Bella Coola Indians were fearful of going further because of warlike tribes, the party paddled down the inlet today called the Dean Channel without getting clear of the maze of isles and islands. Satisfied that he had reached the sea, Mackenzie decided he should settle upon a good place from which to take his final astral readings and return immediately.

After an uneasy night because 50 sullen warriors had insolently poked around their possessions, Mackenzie's men were anxious to depart, but Mackenzie wanted to spend an entire day double checking his navigation.

Begins Return

In between his observations of the sun, he melted some animal grease and mixed vermilion pigment in it; then on the face of a commanding rock he inscribed the words: "Alexander Mackenzie, from Canada, by land, the 22nd of July, one thousand seven hundred and ninety-three." At 10 o'clock that night, the canoe was launched and the paddlers speeded up the channel

On the return voyage they sped along in comparative peace. The depots of food were in perfect order, the canoe waiting and the terrible portage they had cut at the Peace River Canyon was still in good condition

On Aug 24, three and a half months after beginning this incredible trip, Mackenzie and his men were back at Fork Fort. They broke out a flag and let off a fusillade of shots, which brought the two caretakers rushing out to greet them.

Today his Fork Fort is marked by a simple monument with a bronze plaque, but the Indian villages he slept in have long since vanished without a trace. Few men have ever seen the rock on which he painted his name For ironically enough it is not at the scene of his great triumph this his name has been immortalized, but in the northern part of Canada where he first wrongly followed a river.

There, a vast chunk of remote, unpopulated land is called the District of Mackenzie and the nearby Mackenzie Mountains and the Mackenzie River border it on the west

And that is a paradox indeed, for he himself had named the river not the Mackenzie but the Disappointment.

Tax Study Commission Backs Withholding

BY JOHN WYNGAARD

MADISON — The hope of the Democratic state administration to soften the bite of the state personal income tax through the payroll deduction device got a boost when the governor's tax advisory commission in its final report gave a backhanded endorsement to the idea.

Wyngaard

There are those critics who may say that the commission finding was not very logical, but it is contained in the final report, nevertheless, and the governor and his associates probably can derive some political gain from the circumstance.

Here is the commission's brief but nevertheless explicit statement:

"If the legislature provides for an increase in the basic personal income tax rates the use of withholding is necessary in order to prevent evasion and to realize the maximum potential of the rate structure."

MEANING

The statement raises two significant points. First, it appears to say that withholding will be justified only if the present income tax rate structure is revised upward To that extent it is not a complete vindication for Gov. Nelson and the Democrats, who want withholding even for the present income tax schedule

Second, it seems to say that the state income tax is reaching the point of diminishing returns and that if the rates are made more severe there may be so much taxpayer resistance to self-assessment that the state will be forced to exact the payments through employer deductions in self-defense

That is a curious conclusion, indeed, remembering that this part of the commission's report drew no comment or discussion whatever, and thus apparently had the endorsement of the Democrats and friends of the administration who sat as members, as well as the neutrals and Republicans who might have some basic objections to the employer collection idea.

For there really is no way for the person who now is liable to the income tax in Wisconsin, and who is a regular wage and salary earner who would be subject to the withholding alternative, to "evade."

His wages and salaries already are on the books of the federal internal revenue service, with which the state has an agreement to exchange tax data The state merely uses the federal records to make the assessments against delinquents, in the failure of self-assessment What this statement means, if it means anything, is that the state is afraid of the collection effort and the litigation that would result if the income tax liability of Wisconsin wage and salary earners is increased without the buffer of withholding. What the state is worried about, in plain terms, is the kind of taxpayer resistance that would make the additional rates too expensive to collect.

It may not be polite to make the point, but it may also be guessed that any state administration would be reluctant to undertake a collection campaign that would offend hordes of small delinquent taxpayers Withholding, whatever else may be said about it would be a great relief politically to the politicians in power.

RESERVATIONS

These are the considerations, aside from the philosophical arguments about the legitimacy of collecting taxes through a third person, that influence the considerable body of opinion that stands opposed to the introduction of the payroll tax collection scheme in Wisconsin

It is worthy of note also that as the details of the withholding scheme are argued, the champions of the plan rely more and more for their increased revenue claims upon the collections from non-residents who may be employed in Wisconsin temporarily or otherwise. That raises a moral question, although it is surprising that it has not been discussed directly. Does this state have a right to claim tax payments from a person who has no other rights as a resident — including the basic right to vote?

NEW YEAR'S MEDITATIONS

This planet Earth has brought forth nothing new Under the sun since God created Man.
All failures, all successes are the sum
Of what has gone before, since time began.
In every phase of life, accomplishment
Is but a step beyond the well-trod way;
All visions, hopes and dreams are based upon
The sights of now, the sounds of yesterday.

Man limited in power, cannot create,
But only build, progress, regenerate.

None but The Lord, omnipotent and wise,
Can give Earth new dimensions . . . He bestows
The precious gift of Time The moments slip
From out the limbo of eternity
Into the 'here' and on to the 'ago'
In limitless succession, swift and sure;
They often pass unheeded in the midst
Of living . . . only these are new and pure.

Unit Backing Good Roads Draws Interest

Former Champion of Highway Expansion Might Reactivate

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — The revival of the Wisconsin Good Roads Association, which had a leading part in the drives for expansion of the state highway programs in the past, is drawing interest in state legislative circles.

The association recently has employed a promotion man and is showing signs of reactivation after about five years of quiet.

It was one of the spearheads of the campaign in the early part of the last decade for a broader state highway financing program that culminated in the enactment of higher state motor fuel taxes by the 1955 legislature. Chairman of the group is Lester Palmer, one of the best known spokesmen of local government in the state and long-time chairman of the Juneau County Board. Secretary is Jack Olson of Wisconsin Dells, a leader in the tourist promotion business.

Defensive Purpose

One reliable informant reported that the immediate purpose of a revived association is largely defensive. The expenditures for public roads in the state have had some political criticism in recent years. There has also been a campaign by the motor fuel industry to repeal part of the federal motor fuel tax used for highways.

Some leaders of the highway construction industry and related interests have also observed that the idea of a segregated state highway tax fund — which is the base of the state highway construction budget — has had some questioning discussion.

Last week the governor's Tax Revision Advisory Commission referred to the Fund Segregation Law, and said it might be reviewed together with the existing transportation tax laws. The commission made no further comment, but to the highway industry it appeared to be a critical observation. Highway taxes collected by the state have been reserved for highway disbursement historically, and since 1945 by the express mandate of a state statute.

Get Specific Data On Candidates, Rothwell Suggests

WEST BEND—Angus Rothwell, candidate for state superintendent of public instruction, said voters should demand a specific breakdown of administrative experience claims by candidates for the office.

"To say that one qualifies as a state superintendent because he has been an administrator at some time in his life is totally misleading," Rothwell said.

"A state superintendent needs a background of practical, grass roots experience in dealing with school budgets, building construction, reorganization of school districts, and directing broad curriculum improvement programs for the kindergarten through the twelfth grade.

"It will be much more significant for voters to examine the experience and accomplishments of candidates in these areas, than to examine what candidates say their platform is: almost everyone is for good schools, better teacher salaries and working conditions, safer buildings and quality education."

Men Concerned Opposed to Forestry School

Foresters, Committee Say UW Addition Can Not be Justified

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — The men most immediately concerned with the availability of professional foresters have declared their opposition to the recurring proposal for establishment of a professional School of Forestry at the University of Wisconsin.

The forest advisory committee of the Wisconsin Conservation Commission, members of which are drawn from the commercial forest products industries of the state including lumber and paper mills, announced here its opposition to the school plan as most recently put forward by the Wisconsin Towns Association.

Such legislation has been offered in nearly every recent session of the Wisconsin Legislature, and the University of Wisconsin administration has also been cold toward it.

8 Schools Near

The committee said there are now eight first class professional schools for foresters in the midwestern part of the country and that another in Wisconsin cannot be justified.

The committee proposed, instead, that the state authorize a department of forestry at the university which would specialize in graduate studies and research for the benefit of the Wisconsin wood using industries.

The university's existing technical departments have become increasingly associated with the conservation administration in various aspects of forest management, including insect and disease control, tree breeding and timber soils research. The College of Agriculture also has an extension service in forestry that provides assistance to private forestry land owners, principally farmers.

Boy, 13, Travels Over 400 Miles To Find Lost Pet

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP)—A boy travelled homeward today with his dog after traveling 400 miles to find the pet.

Alex Borsi, 13, of Jersey City, N. J., was given bus fare by his father, Jeno, as a Christmas present so he could search for Wanderer, a pet which had been left with friends when the Borsi family moved from Buffalo.

After talking with police in suburban Tonawanda, Alex spent Thursday night on a table at police headquarters, with a patrolman's coat as a blanket.

Newspapers and radio stations told of the search, and Wanderer was located Friday morning.

Alex, a seventh-grader, said he was "very happy" about finding his pet. He said the dog would have a large back yard in which to run and "will make an excellent watch dog."

The Borsis are Hungarians who fled their country during the 1956 uprising.

Man Likes Prison; Draws 3 Years for Threatening Ike

His criminal record shows about 30 convictions—three of them for threatening the President. His time served totals nearly 40 years.

Airport Study to Be Done Rapidly

Carley Promises Report About Fox Valley Dispute in 2 Months

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — Gov. Nelson will have within two months a report from his division of resource development on the relation of Fox River Valley airport locations to the industrial growth of that important Wisconsin region.

David Carley, head of the division which was asked Friday to study the connection between airport sites and economic development, said he will do it as rapidly as possible.

He said he has reviewed the Fisher report on the controversy about proposed joint airport for Winnebago and Outagamie Counties near Neenah and the state department of aeronautics has filed a written substantiation of its position favoring enlargement of the Winnebago County airport at Oshkosh.

Thomas K. Jordan, head of the state airport planning program has opposed the joint airport plan.

Although Nelson's request to Carley for a study of the economic importance of airports and their sites was in general terms and applied to the state as a whole, the request apparently was inspired by the governor's concern over the Fox River Valley airport controversy.

He also indicated that he regards the Valley controversy as a kind of precedent for state airport policy planning.

Noting the need for planning ahead for air traffic, the governor said:

"A case in point which demonstrates the need for this kind of study is the airport problem in Winnebago and Outagamie counties. The location of a major airport in the Fox River Valley has developed strongly conflicting opinions by experts as well as among members of the public.

"A study such as this should enable the state and local communities to achieve a broader view of this problem and to establish standards which would serve as a guide for future development," Nelson added.

Carley explained that his agency is not equipped to provide technical advice with respect to airport locations involving certified air service, but that his staff will try to examine the location problem with respect to projections of population and industrial growth and regional planning.

Doctor Lies Dead as Father Calls for Help

ALGONAC, Mich. (AP) — The telephone in Dr. Charles J. Gorsel's apartment rang and rang but there was no answer.

The caller was Marvin Stapley who was trying frantically to get help for his daughter, Lynn, 2, who had pneumonia. When Gorsel failed to answer, Stapley took the child to another doctor but she died shortly after arriving.

The reason Gorsel, 53, didn't answer was discovered the following day by friends who went to the apartment. The doctor's body was found lying near the phone. He had died of a heart attack.

Jingo Casts Jaundiced Eye at TV 'Changes'

'New' Frontiers for '61 Resemble Usual Electronic Cyclop Formats

BY JINGO

To repeat a pun plunked by Perry Como on his usually superb year-out show this week, "Didn't that year go like 60?" It's certainly a wonder how an old man carrying a heavy scythe can travel so fast.

Jingo

All fall we were promised that 1961 would reveal "new frontiers," but even though there will be changes in the fare for television viewers, nothing really new has appeared on the horizon.

Perhaps indicative of the "changes" is the fate of the perennial idol of daytime watchers Bud Collyer. For 10½ years he has been the host to that prototype of a whole class of TV entertainment, "Beat the Clock."

There is some doubt whether this can be considered a career or a sentence.

However, the start of the new decade will see Collyer mounting new frontiers. His stay with Beat the Clock ends with the year and on Jan. 30, 1961 he starts a brand new show. Well that perhaps is rather strong! The "new" show will be "Number, Please" and it will be somewhat difficult to notice the change.

Another classic of TV's "new" frontier will be Jan. 14's "Fight of the Week" on AC. It will be a middleweight title fight between champion Paul Pender and challenger Terry Downes. You'll remember Dec. 3's "Fight of the Week" on ABC was a middleweight title fight between that superb boxer, Sugar Ray Robinson, as challenger and that brawler who wrestles with gloves on, Gene Fullmer, as champion.

"Person to Person" bowed out last week with a memorable visit with Carl Sandburg, but the bow may be only temporary and in perfect accord with TV's new frontier. There is talk Charles Collingwood will return soon with Ed Murrow's show during the day time.

The "frontiers" may have a few less western and private eye promontories, but situation comedies and "panels" are still fencing off the grasslands and cutting off the water.

Fresh — we trust — from his Broadway stint in musical O Nel, Jackie Gleason will return to his former fields of triumph, but in a "different" format. He'll be host to a panel of celebrities who will make wild guesses before learning "You're in the Picture." The "new" show will premiere on CBS on Jan. 29.

A "new" situation comedy will find "laughs and fun" out of three generations living under one roof. Chick Chandler and Jack Kirkwood and company premiere Jan. 13 on NBC.

Credit Union At Thilmany Ups Savings

Directors Adopt Plan as Increase in Loan Demands Noted

KAUKAUNA — Winn Hess, president of the Thilmany Credit Union, announced, the board of directors have voted to increase the amount of money employes and dependents may save in the Credit Union.

Purpose of the change was due to increased demands for loans, noted the president. The increased share limits bring the total permitted book value to $2,500 plus accrued dividends for employes and $1,500 plus dividends for dependents.

In addition, monthly limitations were removed making it possible for employes to save as much as they wish each month until they reach the limit.

The education committee of the Credit Union suggested employes use the Union as a Christmas saving club. Dividends on the amount saved are paid on June 1 and Dec. 1 thus dividends will be payed even if money is drawn out at Christmas time.

Village Clerk Posts 1,530 Tax Notices

Kimberly Reports Special Hours for Payment of Bills

KIMBERLY—The village post office employes thought they were faced with a second Christmas Friday when Mrs. Katherine Lochschmidt, clerk-treasurer, placed approximately 1,530 tax notices in the mail and over 1,000 fourth quarter water bills.

Tax notices will bring in $456,873.06 of which $437,946.50 is for real estate and personal property taxes while $18,926.56 is to be paid in special assessments, according to the clerk.

Water bills are to be paid by Jan. 16 to avoid penalty charges. Collections will begin Tuesday as all village offices will be closed Monday.

Payment of taxes can be made in full to the village treasurer through Feb. 28 without penalty. Persons planning to pay on the 50-50 plan must pay the first one-half of their taxes by Jan. 31 and the second half to the county treasurer at Appleton not later than July 31 to avoid penalty.

Mrs. Lochschmidt will collect Monday through Thursdays from 8 a.m. to noon and 1 to 4:30 p.m. Friday hours will be from 8 a.m. to noon and from 1 to 7:30 p.m. Taxes will not be collected on Saturday. Dog taxes can be paid when paying regular taxes.

95 Students Earn Homemaker Baby Sitting Certificates

KIMBERLY — Ninety-five students received certificates certifying them as qualified baby sitters after completing a two-day baby sitting clinic sponsored by the Kimberly Homemakers this week.

Over 100 sixth, seventh and eighth grade youngsters took part in each of the two-hour sessions, but 95 were in attendance at both clinics, thus qualifying for a certificate.

The first day was devoted to instructions by Mrs. James Siebers, registered nurse, on the care and handling of a very tiny baby. Parents and potential sitters then discussed obligations of the sitter and what is expected of persons desiring sitters.

The second session consisted of first aid hints and practices, given by Albert J. Van Alphen, a Red Cross registered first aid instructor. Donald Schmeck, Kimberly police officer, told youngsters of precautions to take while sitting, what to do in an emergency and other tips on their responsibilities.

Mrs. W. J. Betters, project chairman, awarded the certificates.

Former Village Person Devises Unique Tree

KIMBERLY — Mrs. Robert Nachel, Chicago, the former Germaine Hanegraaf, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Hanegraaf, was featured recently in an article in a Chicago paper for a novel Christmas tree she made.

The tree was felt to be novel since it is made of bathroom tissue Mrs. Nachel stated, she got the idea from a tissue paper tree she had seen. Her husband fitted a wooden pole with wire branches to support the tissues.

Mrs. Nachel then cut tissue strips from 35 to 195 squares long and these she fit and twisted onto the wires. The tree took 18 rolls of tissue paper. Fire department regulations prevent putting lights on the tissue tree although it is decorated with non-flammable ornaments. The traditional tree, trimmed by the children, is located in the basement.

Pearl Buck Tries Hand At Producing

Movie 'Big Wave' Developed From Story for Children

By BOB THOMAS
AP Movie-TV Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Having done virtually every kind of writing, Nobel Prize-winner Pearl Buck at 68 has now tried her hand at producing a movie.

She likes it.

The distinguished author was here to show the product to Allied Artists Executives. They liked it, too.

The movie is "The Big Wave," and it developed from one of Miss Buck's shorter works for children.

"I wrote it during the war when there was so much fear of death among children," she said. "I remembered villages in Japan where the people lived between earthquakes and tidal waves, where death was a constant companion yet the people remained light-hearted and even gay."

Adapted to TV

The inception of the movie project came when she adapted "The Big Wave" for an hour TV show. The director was Tad Danielewski, who thought the tale could be expanded and shot as a film in the Japanese locale. Miss Buck agreed.

"I had sold three of my books to movies—'The Good Earth,' 'Dragon Seed' and 'China Sky,'" she recalled. "They have a peculiar system in Hollywood. they won't let the author have anything to do with the film. I didn't like some of the things that were done, and so I decided to sell no more of my books until I could have some control over the filming."

She went to Japan and co-produced with Danielewski, who directed. She assisted in all aspects of the film, which was financed by Allied Artists and Japan's Toho Co. Touchy problem was the filming of women pearl divers, who customarily swim only in G-strings.

"We solved the problem by shooting them two ways, covered for the American market and uncovered for the rest of the world," Miss Buck said. "It seems rather silly to me, coming from that part of the world where such things aren't important. But attitudes are different in this country, and I don't want to offend anyone."

'Can-Can' Film Here for One Performance

The movie version of the Broadway musical "Can-Can" will be the one-night New Year's Eve feature at the Viking theater. Tonight's performances are scheduled for 6:20, 8:50 and 11:15.

Set in the lavish Paris of 1896, the film musical has a stellar cast that includes Frank Sinatra, Maurice Chevalier, Shirley MacLaine, Juliet Prowse and Louis Jourdain.

"Can-Can" is the movie Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev criticized during his American visit in 1959. It centers about Paris night-club life when the Can-Can dance was at once popular and controversial.

Miss MacLaine, recently voted actress of the year at the Venice Film festival, dances her way through the strenuous production numbers as the lead dancer at the fictional Bal de Paradis, assisted by Miss Prowse. Maurice Chevalier plays the character role of an aging judge and Sinatra is a lawyer in the movie, both approving the dazzling dance. Jourdain is the stern young judge who bans the dance but becomes entangled in a romance with the star.

The Cole Porter score includes the song hits "I Love Paris" and "You Do Something to Me."

Faculty Member At St. Norbert To Give Concert

The fourth concert by a young pianist who is rapidly gaining fame in this area will be presented at 8:15 p.m. Thursday when Paul Reed appears at St. Norbert College.

Reed is a piano instructor in the St. Norbert music department. He came to the college in the fall of 1959. Reviewers praised his local debut a couple of months later and his performance as soloist with the Green Bay Symphonette last March. He presented his third concert at the college last May.

Reed is a native of Casey, Iowa, and holds a master of music degree from Drake University. He performed with the Des Moines Symphony Orchestra in the annual Young Artist Auditions in 1954 and 1956, and in 1955 he won the three-state regional student-artists piano competition sponsored by the National Federation of Music Clubs.

For four years straight, Reed was the all-state winner in contests sponsored by the Iowa High School Music Association, and was 1957 runner-up in the Young Artist Piano Competition of the American Society of Musicians in Chicago.

Vitamins Will Be On Sale at the Look Drug Stores, Inc. located in Kaukauna at 112 E. Second street, and at 106 W. Wisconsin avenue, during the entire month of January. All products in the Olafsen line will be reduced.

In 1911 Casimir Funk, a Polish biochemist, discovered a certain substance which he named vitamin from the words vita, meaning life, and amine, the name of a certain kind of nitrogen compound. Since 1911 it has been proved that the vitamins in the food are essential to health and growth.

No one vitamin can take the place of another and the lack of any one vitamin may affect a person's health.

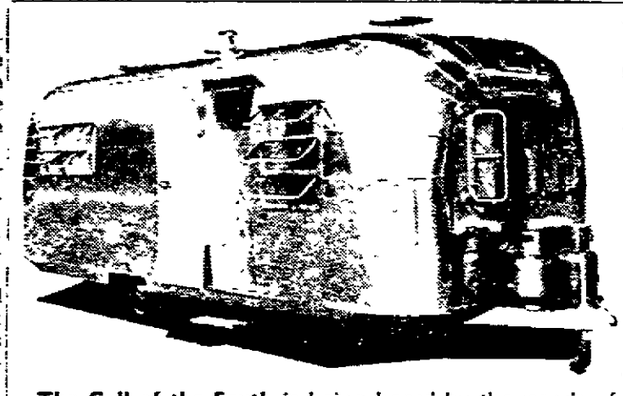

Scientists have discovered about 25 different vitamins although the exact function of each in the feeding of the body has not been discovered in all cases. Nearly are all named by letters of the alphabet in the order of their discovery. Some of them are:

Vitamin A, essential for growing children and adults need it to build resistance to infectious diseases.

Vitamin-B Complex, destroyed by overcooking of food, the lack of it slows growth and causes nervous disorders, loss of appetite and fatigue.

Vitamin C is essential to the proper use of oxygen by the cells and to maintaining healthy gums and teeth.

Vitamin D, is valuable in preventing rickets and is necessary for the proper formation of bones and teeth.

The Call of the South is being heard by thousands of Wisconsin families at this time of the year. Fulfill your travel dreams in the luxury of an Avion Travel Trailer, sold by Stalker Archery company of Clintonville. The light aluminum travel trailer, built to outlast them all, is the perfect vacation companion for your family for many years to come.

There are hundreds of national parks and monuments in the southwestern part of the United States which would mean delightful vacation adventures this winter. See Arizona, Florida or Mexico and escape the hard winter weather ahead.

Trip-taking was never more fun, more comfortable, more money-saving than the Avion way, according to Stalker Archery Company, local Avion dealer, on Highway 45 on the west edge of Clintonville.

Plus this wonderful vacation, your own Avion will be ready and waiting for next summer's fun and trips for years to come.

Wherever your destination, you can "go native" with all the comforts of home — hot and cold running water, electrical (or gas) facilities, modern bath, complete kitchen — they're yours.

The firm states that whatever your route, through the mountains, into the deep woods, over hot desert, this lean-muscled travel trailer tows, turns, handles like a dream. Stalker Archery said because of the air craft type of construction, the Avion of the same size weighs approximately 1,000 pounds less than any other trailer.

With an Avion behind you, you can eliminate costly motel and meal bills, tips and timetables, tedious packing and unpacking. Take it with you wherever you go and you can treat yourself to homecooking on modern appliances, enjoy a shower at the turn of a knob, sleep in the luxury of inner-spring mattresses.

The models run from a 21 foot, two-sleeper up to the imperial 30 foot model which is America's luxury travel trailer with comforts of home convenience. They are family fashioned, value perfect for spend-less, see-more, traveling. See them at Stalker Archery Company in Clintonville

The Post-Crescent Will Not Publish An Edition Monday, January 2, because of the Holiday weekend.

Inside Labor

Predicts Reuther Will Join U.N. Delegation

BY VICTOR RIESEL

Forecasts are easy to come by and tough to be rid of—but what's a columnist without the courage of his predictions? So here goes:

Riesel

Walter Reuther will get into the U.S. diplomatic service by joining Adlai Stevenson at the UN. John Kennedy will appoint the Auto Union leader to the U.S. delegation for the second half of the 15th General Assembly session reconvening in March. If Chairman Khrushchev returns for more shoeless slurs, Reuther will have what he's always wanted—a chance to debate in a world forum with the head of the Soviet Union. . . .

Sixty - one will be the toughest bargaining year since 1937's sitdowns. The toughest duel will be Reuther's jousting with the Big Three automobile manufacturers.

At the end of this month Auto Union leaders will formulate their demands. These will include a shorter work week and longer vacations, profit sharing, retention of the cost - of - living clause now so intensely disliked by industry, higher wages, retraining of workers affected by electronic brain machines, earlier retirement age, and a U.S. presidential mediation board for the auto industry crisis. If the recession is receding, I believe there will be an auto strike. . . .

There will be minor crises in the trucking, rubber, meat packing, machinery and coal industries. In all, there will be 180-major contract negotiations. Some 4 million will be affected. There will be more flash strikes than there've been in a decade. Wage increase will average about $3.50, or a little better than 8 cents an hour. This will be the lowest average increase in over 20 years. . .

There will be strong pressure on Kennedy to force the big companies into settling quickly with the big unions. In the past, this "force" has come from the secretaries of defense, treasury, and labor, as well as the White House In '61, this will not happen. Kennedy will tell his own people to go down the middle. There will be anger in labor circles.

Jimmie Hoffa will stay on as provisional president of the Teamsters—but the monitors still will be on his back.

Bob Kennedy will not dash into an open vendetta with the Teamsters' Union. Instead, the new attorney general will team up with Arthur Goldberg, his intimate friend and lawyer who has represented brother Kennedy in some actions. They will ask for new powers for their investigators and use both the Labor Department and the Justice Department as a vise. Goldberg will be a tougher secretary of labor than was Jim Mitchell.

Labor will try to knock at least one Republican presidential hopeful out of the running long before the race. New York unions plan to concentrate this year on defeating Nelson Rockefeller in next year's gubernatorial campaign and will begin organizing soon to break his control of the pivotal state. They don't want him to be in a power position to take New York's 45 electoral votes from Kennedy in '64 . . They're thinking that far ahead and will organize year-round political activity in the next few months aimed at the next presidential race. This one was too close for them.

A general strike will topple Fidel Castro. If he survives, he will take refuge behind the Iron Curtain winding up in Moscow via Prague . . . : Statistics seeping into our intelligence centers reveal an impending production crisis inside Russia. Responsibility for the "hard goods" and food failure will fall on N. S. Khrushchev and he will share power with Kozlov, Suslov and Kosygin.

In the U.S. the year end will see a swift switch to prosperity from the slow early months. Unemployment will dip under 3,500,000. Those at work will total over 68 million. Most of the heavy spending will be for defense. Other billions will go for huge government - inspired construction projects. There will be no war. Just peace with ulcers.

Champion Victory of '60 Played by French Team

The most important bridge victory of 1960 was that of the French team at the World Bridge Olympiad, held in Turin, Italy, last April with 28 nations competing. England was second.

This was the sixth straight year that the United States had failed to win the world championship. American teams had won the first four world championships, but then apparently lost the magic touch.

Only one major scandal marred the French victory. Two of the six French players were accused of unfair practice. The French bridge authorities investigated and returned a mixed verdict. The players were not proven guilty, but were suspended for one year anyway.

Just to give the affair the proper comic-opera touch, the French also meted out a six-month suspension to the person who had accused the players (as punishment for not speaking up earlier).

There was no scandal in bridge at home, but there was the usual anguished howl when the American Contract Bridge League named the team that will represent the United States and Canada in the next world championship. To avoid charges of favoritism and politics, the League is planning a special contest to determine the next team. Next year there will be a different kind of howl, but it will be just as anguished.

The player of the year in the United States was Robert Jordan, Philadelphia, who broke all previous records for master points amassed in a single year. The total hasn't yet been computed, but it is in the neighborhood of 900.

Jordan prizes himself on the fact that none of his customers has ever complained, and he tries to play bridge on the same principle. He might have even more success at bridge if he picked his partners the way he picks his customers. (Jordan sells cemetery lots.)

Robert Reynolds, Coral Gables, Fla., won the Life Master Individual Championship, principal singles event of the tournament year. Mr. and Mrs. Morris Portugal, Los Angeles, won the Life Master Pair Championship, chief pair event of the year.

Los Angeles won the right to be considered bridge capital of the United States by defeating New York in two 80-board matches. New Yorkers still think they have more first class players per square foot than any other city of the world, but they admit that those cats from L.A. are pretty cool customers at the bridge table.

Bridge proved very successful as a television entertainment during 1960, due largely to veteran bridge master Charles H. Goren. It also provided a surprise to the publishing business when a new bridge book "Five Weeks to Winning Bridge" by yours truly sold close to a million copies.

Choice of Finesses

How do you finesse against an opponent's king? Do you try to capture the king or do you try to get it out of the way painlessly?

South ruffed the first round of hearts, drew trumps with the ace and jack, and then started the diamonds.

How do you play this combination of cards? Do you lead the queen from dummy, or do you lead a low diamond toward dummy's queen?

In general, the answer depends on how many tricks you need in the suit.

2 Or 3-Trick Plays

In some hands you need two tricks in this sort of suit, and you prefer not to lose a trick. When that is the case, you lead the queen from dummy. If the king is at your right, your finesse will permit you to win the first two tricks.

Even if the king is at your left, you will still win two tricks, but you will lose one trick.

It's wrong to lead the queen from dummy when you need three tricks in the suit. That's what happened when the hand was played, and West won the first diamond trick with the king and a later diamond trick with the ten. The second diamond trick defeated the contract.

You don't lose by leading the queen of diamonds if the suit splits 3-2. You will make exactly three diamond tricks no matter which opponent has the king. However, you gain nothing by leading the queen. You could win three diamond tricks just as easily by cashing the ace of diamonds and then leading low toward dummy.

Diamond Split

There is a difference whenever the diamonds split 4-1. Then your best chance is to cash the ace first in the hope of dropping a singleton king. If the king fails to drop, lead low toward dummy.

This line of play gives you three tricks if West has the four diamonds. He may play low on the first lead toward dummy, but you can get back by ruffing a heart to lead another diamond from your hand.

No line of play would give you three tricks if East has the four diamonds. He is sure to win one trick with his king and another with the ten or nine.

The situation would be quite different if dummy had Q-J-10-9 rather than Q-J-5-4. Then you would surely start the diamonds by leading the queen from dummy. Even if dummy had Q-J-10-4, you would still be sure of three diamond tricks if you led the queen from dummy.

The way to test the situation is to imagine that the queen will be covered by the king if you lead it. Play the suit mentally and see if this is what you want to happen. Avoid leading an honor for a finesse unless you are quite satisfied to see the honor covered.

Home Resolutions 1961

Have the new furnishings the family planned to buy, or the room remodelling, too often been put off until next year? In just two days now it will be next year and time to begin to make postponed plans come true. Make three resolutions for 1961 homewise.

1. Resolve to forge ahead with at least one big project for home improvement, perhaps the adding of a family room, perhaps the complete redecorating of outdated bedrooms. Another worthy project is a reorganization of storage facilities all over the house to find more and more convenient places for everything—and what a time saver and housekeeping help that is. Or the project might be restyling the children's rooms to fit their advancing ages, or getting rid of every uncomfortable seat in favor of deep comfort everywhere.

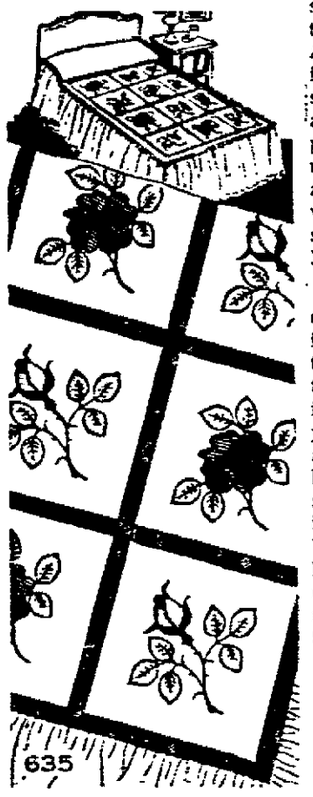

2. Resolve to spend on home improvement the proportion of the family budget that it really deserves. Go over last year's expenditures, and if yours are like those of all too many other families, it may come as a shock that money spent on their homes actually is very small compared to the inflated totals for transportation, entertainment, even on cosmetics and jewelry. Reliable statistics show that this is generally true. Critical comparison of categories in your own budget may make that big new cabinet seem no extravagance at all.

3. Resolve to think things through this year, and plan each room as a whole from the start of refurnishing that's either complete or partial. Resolve to avoid whim purchases, and decisions on any item without completely considering everything else. This is the only way to avoid disappointment, and eliminates the most baffling problems. It's also the way to make sure that money goes as far as it can go. Review last year's problems—didn't most of them arise because one or two new wrong things upset a complete effect?

Two Friday the 13ths

Superstitious People Might Say Year Ahead Is Unlucky

The superstitious might say we're about to enter a less lucky year than the one ending. There are two Fridays the 13th—January and October—in 1961, but only one—in May—in 1960.

They may be right, for 1961 has two fewer long weekends than the year before. The new year will bring New Year's Day on Sunday—with the next day as a legal holiday, Labor Day on Monday as usual, Christmas on Monday and New Year's Eve on Sunday. But Memorial and Independence days are on Tuesday, instead of Monday as they were in 1960.

Although there is one less day in 1961 because it isn't Leap Year, there's one more Sunday.

Many Holidays

Legal holidays include Lincoln's birthday, Sunday, Feb. 12; Washington's birthday, Wednesday, Feb. 22; Columbus Day, Thursday, Oct. 12; Veterans' Day, Saturday, Nov. 11; and Thanksgiving, Thursday, Nov. 23.

Religious holidays include Ash Wednesday, Feb. 15; Passover, beginning the evening of Friday, March 31; Easter Sunday, April 2; Ascension Day, Thursday, May 11; Jewish New Year, Monday and Tuesday, Sept. 11 and 12; Reformation Day, Tuesday, Oct. 31; All Saints' Day, Wednesday, Nov. 1; first day of both Hanukkah and Advent, Sunday, Dec. 3, and Immaculate Conception Feast, Friday, Dec. 8.

Other special days include Valentine's Day, Tuesday, Feb. 14; St. Patrick's Day, Friday, March 17; and Halloween, Tuesday, Oct. 31.

Mitzi Remembers When It's Too Late

By Jeannette Griffith

Mitzi and Grady were over for night. Grady is going to apply for dinner one night this week to the 6 to midnight shift."

help us finish the Christmas left- "But he has to be at work at overs. Perhaps I should say the plant at 8 a.m.' And an 18-Grady helped finish them. Since year-old boy needs more sleep Mitzi's been pregnant, even the than that. What's more, Mitzi's thought of food makes her sick. afraid to stay alone."

Though Grady ate ravenously — "I know. That's why I told he confessed he'd been doing most Grady to drop Mitzi off here at of the cooking — he also seemed night if he gets the job."

preoccupied and after dinner, Gets Job with a worried frown, asked if he Grady got the job. But when could talk to John alone. Mitzi turned up at our house sev-

They were in the bedroom together for almost an hour and, though Grady's shoulders were set a little straighter when he came out, I had to wait until John and I were getting ready for bed to learn the reason.

Offers Advice

"I hope I've given Grady the right advice," John said worriedly. "But with the baby coming I don't see how those kids are going to make both ends meet unless there's more money forthcoming. Knowing Grady wouldn't accept a loan even if I offered it, I suggested moonlighting."

I repeated the word "moonlighting" in such a shocked voice that John grinned.

"It's not what you think, whatever that is. It means simply that a person holds down a night job in addition to his daytime job. Taxi companies are always looking for reliable drivers. In fact, there was an ad in the paper to-hand at detecting stiff upper lips could have guessed it was from necessity. "Boy, are we going to be loaded. I don't even know what we'll do with all the money. Maybe buy a new car. Wait until I tell Bruce and Libby about it. Where are they, anyway?"

"Libby's gone to a party," I said busily, "and Bruce is getting dressed. I put down the dancing dress I'd just finished which I'd been working on and started for the basement.

Mitzi followed. "Bruce is going to a dance, isn't he? At the Country Club? This time I merely nodded and would have started back up the stairs with a pile of clean towels if Mitzi hadn't pulled me back.

"It's all right, Aunt Jeanne. You needn't try to make things easier for me by running up and down stairs to avoid answering. I'd forgotten tonight was the night of the big dance." Unspilled tears glistened in her eyes. "I know everybody will be at that dance. And that I could be there too with the music playing, and dancing every dance."

Remembers When

Swaying a little she shut her eyes and for an instant I could see her as she saw herself — wearing her white formal with the blue bow-knots and satin cummerbund. Then as suddenly the image was gone for both of us. Her eyes were dry and her voice a little flat. "Instead, I left school, married Grady. . . .and now I'm going to have a baby." There was a wistful little catch in her voice. "Isn't it funny, not ha-ha funny, but strange, how 'over' everything can be when you're only 17?"

Briskly, I said "nonsense" that her life and Grady's was just beginning. This is true, of course. But looking into Mitzi's clear, newly wise brown eyes I know she knows that childhood days at best are fleeting and a woman is married for a long, long time.

Make Thank Yous Warm, Personal

BY ANGELO PATRI

Boys and girls, you enjoyed getting the things you found in your stocking and under the tree. You got just what you wanted and no doubt, a couple of happy surprises. Now getting is fine, but it always has a price and the price of a Christmas gift is your thank-you note. I know you know all about that. But wait a minute.

You hate writing notes. I know that well. When you have to, you go to the stationery shop and buy a thank-you card and if you can possibly get by with one that has a printed line or so of thanks you'll send it. Or you'll write a line or two about as personal as the printed one. When you do, you are being less than appreciative of the time, trouble and money spent for your pleasure. That's too bad.

Write Note

If you are your good generous, thankful self you will take a sheet of pretty letter paper and tell Grandmother, Aunt or Uncle what their gift means to you what you liked about it, why you wanted it, how kind they were to go all out to get it for you, how you are or will be using it. When an older person gets a letter like that from a very young one he doesn't see a misspelled word, a slip in grammar, or any defect in it whatever. He sees only the picture of a loving grateful happy child and he returns all that feeling in double quantity. It is good to be loved, isn't it?

Another thing. The promptness of the thank-you note is bound to be uppermost in the mind of the one receiving it. If it came fast on the heels of Christmas day it is warmly received indeed because it makes the giver feel that his gift filled the child's heart to overflowing and he just had to write that minute to say so.

Early Thanks

The young person who puts off writing the note of thanks until his mother or father says "You sit right down this minute and write that note," cannot possibly write with the warmth that flooded his spirit on Christmas morning. The first fine glow has died down. The shine is off the gift and you can be sure the giver knows it.

To sit down when all the house is still is the time for that note. The enthusiasm of the hours has not yet dimmed and will seep through the words. The sooner the better, lest reluctance show in the forced writing. No child enriched by his elders' kindness would want that.

Prevent Matting Of New Blankets

Matting of blankets is often due to drying. It can also be the result of improper washing. Follow the washing and drying instructions of the manufacturer of your blankets. New combinations of synthetic and natural fibers often require special handling.

Blankets should be dried singly because of their size and weight. While your blankets are washing:

1. Place three or four large dry turkish towels in dryer and preheat for at least 5 minutes.

2. Place wet blanket in dryer and tumble it in with the dry towels. The towels buffer the action of the dryer and prevent matting.

3. Dry at high heat and remove blanket from dryer while slightly damp. A 3 pound blanket will require from 12 to 18 minutes. Pull blanket into shape and hang when completely dry. Brush with fine wire brush to raise nap and press bindings with cool iron.

The Ailing House

Vinyl Tile Fine for Basement

BY ROGER C. WHITMAN

VINYL TILE ON BASEMENT FLOOR?

Question: I have a large quantity of vinyl asbestos tile that I was planning to put down on our cement basement floor. Recently I heard this was not recommended because of a tendency to mildew and curl at the edges. Is this true?

Answer: Properly applied, with a waterproof adhesive, vinyl asbestos tile should give satisfactory service on a cement basement floor. Follow installation instructions of tile manufacturers; these are available at tile dealers or directly from the manufacturer.

CREOSOTE STAIN THROUGH WHITE SHINGLES

Question: Recently we moved into an old stone farm house. There is an addition at the back which is wood shingle. Originally the shingles were treated with creosote; now painted white. The brownish stain of the creosote is coming through the white, and is unsightly. We would like to repaint, but have been told it would be useless because the same old thing would happen again. What do you suggest?

Answer: The Department of Agriculture recommends that shingles or other wood surfaces treated with creosote or creosote stains not be painted until they have weathered for several years.

However, fairly good results have been obtained by coating the wood surface (first removing present paint down to bare wood) with a good quality exterior aluminum paint, allowing to dry at least a week; then apply a second coat and allowing this to dry for about a week. Finish with a top coat of good exterior paint.

SOOT-COVERED BRICK FIREPLACE

Question: We are purchasing a home which has a red brick fireplace. The brick is covered with soot and smoke. How can we clean the brick?

Answer: Concrete and masonry cleaning and etching preparations are available at masonry supplies dealers; follow manufacturer's directions for use. Or clean with a stiff brush or steel wool and scouring powder or a mechanic's hand soap containing sand, followed by ample rinsing with clear water. If the soiling is too deep for removal by this method, rub the brick surface with a carborundum block, available at paint and hardware dealers.

A Lovelier You

By Mary Sue Miller

Party Loveliness

Here are six easy ways to heighten your loveliness for a New Year's Eve party — or any other:

In the interest of head-to-toe perfection, allow ample time for dressing and do be systematic about it. Obviously rushing can only produce a helter-skelter finish. The effect of dawdling, like doodling, is entirely aimless.

So that you feel champagne bubbly, loll in a bubble bath for ten minutes. Then scrub until pink, briskly towel dry and rub down with a light cologne.

For a candlelight glow, apply a facial — a mask, stimulation cream, or just plain soap suds — before bathing and leave it on until bath rites are completed.

Make up in a strong light. It is the only sure means of achieving a natural, spontaneous look, and one that stands up under any sort of lighting you may encounter during the evening.

To keep your make-up and eyes from losing their sparkle before the "ball" is over, apply two filmings of powder base. Wait ten minutes before applying the second one; use the time to lie down and compress cool witch hazel to your eyes.

Just as a festive fillip, spark your tresses with gold or silver spray. Using the least bit, spray the entire head. The goal is not color but shimmer — the shimmer of moonlight and starlight.

Your Problems

Young Girl Must Learn She Can't Buy Friends, Ann Says

BY ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Don't tell me to go to my clergyman with this. I'm too ashamed to let anyone know it's on my mind.

Ann Landers

Our daughter is 15 and very beautiful. I'm not saying this because I'm her mother. Everyone remarks about her looks. We are people of means so she has lovely clothes and a gorgeous home. She has her own bedroom and sitting room, private phone, and the finest stereo equipment money can buy.

The trouble is she has no friends. My husband is in a business that provides us with free tickets to almost every sports event and musical event in town. When our daughter invites guests they always accept, but they never seek her out. What's wrong? — Quiet Mother

Dear Mother: How does your daughter treat people? This is what counts. Looks, clothes and a lovely home don't make friends.

You and your husband could help by putting an end to the free tickets. Sometimes kids feel they can buy friends with entertainment and that so long as they provide fancy surroundings they can be domineering, snobbish and even abusive. Remove the props and let your beautiful daughter paddle her own canoe.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm a young woman who moved into this community a year ago. We bought a new home and spent a lot of time and energy (not to mention money) making our place attractive.

I decided I wasn't going to entertain until the home was complete. Last week I had the first group in — eight ladies for a bridge luncheon. They were all very complimentary about the landscaping and the exterior of the house. They commented on the living room and sun porch, but no one asked to see the rest of the house. I was deeply hurt and cried after they left. Why are people so mean? Surely they must have known that I was eager to show them the place. Please tell me. — Hurt Hostess

Dear Hostess: It's possible that the women were waiting for you to offer to show the rest of the house. Since you said nothing they may have assumed it was not ready to be shown.

I hope you never have anything more serious than this to cry about, Toots. It seems pretty unimportant when you consider what most people have to put up with.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Have you ever heard of anyone keeping their New Year resolutions? I am 13 years old and I have a long list of resolutions for the new year. I made them up as I went along and I know I would be a better person if I could keep some of them even half way.

My older brother says I am a starry-eyed idealist and that nobody keeps New Year's resolutions. He claims they are just something to talk about and that nobody ever sticks to them. Is he right? — Self-Improver

Dear Improver: Your brother is wrong. If you aim for the choice apple on the top limb your chances for hitting it are better than not aiming at all.

Striving for excellence and trying to be better than you are is not starry-eyed and idealistic. The only way people improve themselves is through constant effort. Good luck to you and a Happy New Year!

Shopping Tip

How to buy a dress in one easy lesson: Know your figure faults and assets. Variety in fashion for the coming year makes all things possible to most figures. Play up a graceful neck, for instance, with the curve of a neckline—cowls, turtles and loosely slung mufflers. Play down a too-ample bosom line by avoiding sleeve lengths ending at the bosom level, and heavy-handed trim at the neckline. For camouflaging a hipline, either way, consider the new bias-cut skirts here now and on the way in.

Solution of Yesterday's Puzzle

'Unconscious' Child Was Just Sleeping

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — An emergency call sent a patrol car racing through the streets looking for a small boy lying unconscious on the sidewalk. When the officers reached him and raised him up they asked what was wrong.

"I was sleeping," he said.

"Why on the sidewalk?"

"That's where I was when I got tired," he replied.

Lesson in English

Words often misused: Distinguish between OCCUR (to happen) and TRANSPIRE (to leak out; become known). "The accident occurred yesterday," and, "It transpired that he left town last week."

Often mispronounced: Cosmopolite. Pronounce kahz-mop-oh-lite, accent on second syllable.

Often misspelled: Refectory (room for eating). Refractory (stubborn).

Synonyms: Law, canon, code, command, commandment, decree, edict, enactment, formula, mandate, order, ordinance, regulation, rule, statute.

Word study: "Use a word three times and it is yours." Let us increase our vocabulary by mastering one word each day.

Today's word: aggrandizement; augmentation, increase, exaltation: "The bachelor enrolled in a dancing school for the aggrandizement of his personality."

Torpedo Top Great Fun to Play on Sidewalk or Table

BY CAPPY DICK

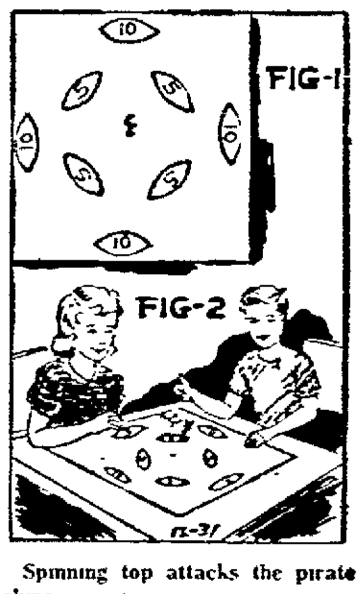

Torpedo Top is fun to play on a table or the sidewalk. On a sidewalk use a full-fledged top spun with a string. On a table use a small top that is spun with the fingers.

The top is the torpedo and the idea is to spin it so it runs into pirate ships. If playing the game on the sidewalk, the ships are drawn with chalk. If playing on a table, they are cut from cardboard and placed on the table wherever you want them to be.

Each pirate ship the top touches as it spins adds to the score of the player who spun the top. The players take turns and the player with the highest score in five turns is the winner.

If the game is played on the sidewalk, the battle area is one square of concrete. Begin by making a dot at the middle of the square ("C" in Figure 1). This is the starting place for each spinner. Around the dot draw the outlines of four large ships and four small ones. Mark each large ship with the number 10 and each small one with 5. These are the point values. If playing the game on a table, cut four large ships and four small ones from cardboard. Print the proper value on each. The ships are arranged around the table and the starting place is at the center.

For a player to score the top needs only to touch a ship. He wins the number of points the ship is worth. If it touches the same ship twice the score is not increased.

If the top runs into two or more ships during one continuous spin, the score is the sum of the ship numbers. For example if it runs into two small ships and one big one the score is 20 points.

If the top goes off the sidewalk square or the table without hitting a ship or just stops spinning without hitting one, the score is zero for that play.

Electrical Advances Make Sherwood Bank Most Modern in State

Remodeling Job Aimed at Providing Top Efficiency, Comfort for Years to Come

SHERWOOD — This community of less than 400 persons boasts the state's first totally electric bank. It's even heated by electricity.

When officials of the bank decided that the time had come to expand and remodel the 47-year-old building, they visualized a bank that would not only be modern by today's standards, but would stay modern for years to come. The result is that Sherwood State Bank is the most modern in the state.

The job was started from scratch. The old bank was gutted down to the brick walls and a new addition, larger than the original bank, was erected.

New Insulation

Since the bank was to be heated electrically, special attention was given to the insulation. Eight inches of high value insulation was installed in the ceiling, four inches in the walls, and four inches in the floor. A plastic film prevents internal moisture from entering the insulation where it would lower its insulating value.

The electric heating provides control of temperature in each room independent of the temperature in other rooms. Security of the vaults was assured because no ducts were needed.

Special attention was also given to lighting the bank. An attractive, yet functional system was called for. Demands for accuracy in a bank are exacting. Signatures must be carefully checked, figures accurately and properly entered and many other critical seeing tasks performed. This means that high seeing levels must be maintained.

Lighting Specialists

Wisconsin Michigan Power Co lighting specialists were called in to design the system. In so doing they took into account the over-all decorating scheme of the bank. The result is an abundance of high level, glare-free light that blends harmoniously with the bank's simulated light wood paneling, light colored tile floors and other multi-colored furnishings.

In the customer and general work areas, there is a luminous ceiling. Recessed, fluorescent fixtures are shielded by two layers of plastic panels which softly diffuse the light and flood the room with 110 foot candles of pleasant illumination. This is in contrast to the 25-30 foot candles commonly found in most business places.

In the executive and other offices, lighting levels are considerably higher. Here, 150 foot candles are provided by flush type, fluorescent panels mounted at intervals in the ceiling. This over-all room lighting is supplemented at counter working areas by fluorescent valance strips.

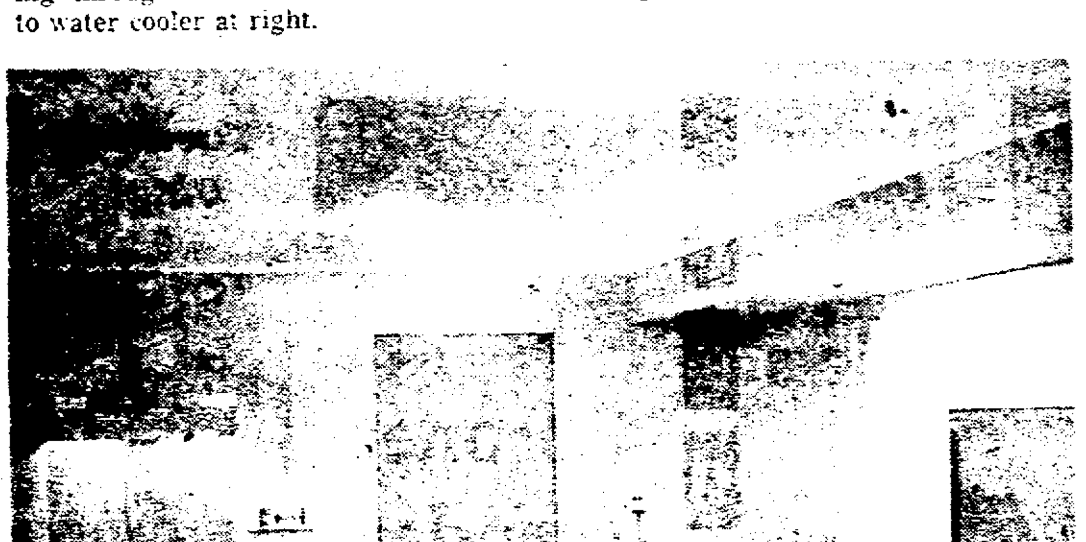

Lighting Control

Multiple switching enables bank personnel to control lighting from a variety of convenient locations. Pilot lights outside of all enclosed rooms indicate whether lights within the rooms are on or off. Electronic eyes automatically control all night lights.

Unusual attention to detail, layout and design for the bank can be credited to the Meyer Corp. of Neenah who were the general contractors.

Luminous Ceiling Drenches this customer and working area with 110 foot candles of glare-free light. Fluorescent light is diffused through two layers of plastic panels, eliminating glare at light source while providing high level lighting throughout entire room. Attractive walltype electric heater is shown next to water cooler at right.

Wisconsin-Michigan Power Co. Photos

Interest in Employes' Welfare at the Sherwood State Bank prompted this total electric kitchen in the basement of the bank. Here, employes can enjoy lunches in a relaxed and pleasant atmosphere. Light is supplied by drop-lens ceiling fixtures, range hood light and flush-type lighting over sink and counter areas.

Lawrence Says

Government Intervention Hurts Economy

New Administration Must Find Program To Weather 1960s

BY DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON — Many people are asking what the impact of the new administration is going to be on business. This is the season when economists, businessmen and market analysts are making forecasts of the outlook for the new year.

Lawrence

Predictions and forecasts often are unwittingly the result of wishful thinking. The tendency is to see the brighter side of things and not to be too grim in looking at the facts of life.

But the facts of international as well as national economics are staring the world in the face. History tells us that after every major war there is a readjustment. Sometimes it comes within a few years after the end of hostilities, and sometimes it takes a decade or more. It was ten years after World War I before the 1929 crash and the ensuing depression affected country after country. It was not until World War II broke out that a substantial recovery developed.

Now the readjustment of economic conditions growing out of wartime expansion is under way again. These changes are sometimes referred to as "mild" or "severe" depending upon the extent of the unemployment or the decline in profits.

Government Interruption

The figures show that, while recession in the last two years has affected adversely a number of businesses, the country as a whole has taken the readjustment in its stride. It is because of this over-all capacity of the nation to absorb declines in particular industries that much encouragement is derived for the future.

But the basic fact which cannot be glossed over is the extent to which both the national and international situations are influenced by artificiality. It has to be conceded that governmental intervention again and again prevents the natural law of supply and demand from operating.

Thus when the government of the United States is spending more than $40 billion a year for armament — largely for unproductive purposes — it is obvious that any change in the war or peace picture has a direct or indirect influence on business conditions.

Unused Plant Capacity

Nobody has come forward with any answer as to how to prevent such a disruption. Plenty of remedies are suggested as to what might be done when a recession does come — such as federal appropriations for more housing projects or other ways of stimulating growth through federal expenditures. But these devices last only a little while and, when they have exhausted themselves, the county is back again to where it was before.

Today there is much talk about unused plant capacity. But only a few years back new dealers were crying out that industry was not expanding fast enough. Many of the presently idle plants would be used if natural laws were allowed to operate and if artificial measures were not constantly interjected into the economic situation by the politicians.

The enactment of lower tariffs by this country has resulted in great benefits to foreign countries, but it has also caused American companies to put up plants abroad where they can produce more cheaply than they can in this country.

Top Advisers

But the tariff situation is only one of many factors that brings about adverse business conditions. Perhaps the most serious single factor is the arbitrary way in which labor-management disputes are handled. The labor-union leaders demand the maximum in wage increases irrespective of the capacity of industry to absorb these. Whenever labor chiefs overplay their hand, they bring about such a maladjusment as inevitably results in a recession. The country today is still suffering from the ill effects of the steel strike of 1959.

The new administration will have a number of top economic advisers, some from the "right" and some from the "left." But the new President will have to make a basic decision as to whether he will go in for a lot of experiments that could produce an even greater dislocation in the economy. The new administration must of necessity try to cure the recession and bring an early recovery, or else face an adverse verdict in the congressional elections of 1962.

Perhaps the biggest single improvement that could be made in the whole business situation would be to find a way to encourage the replacement or renovation of old plants. This could be brought about by a revision of tax laws on depreciation allowances. Higher allowances of this type over a short period of time now would tend to bring in more tax revenue in the long run.

The American economy is basically strong and will be able to weather the current storm. The big question is: Can it also fortify itself against a series of storms in the 1960's?

Kennedy Adviser Outlines Economic Boost Proposals

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (AP)—One of President-elect John F. Kennedy's economic advisers says the new administration will "take vigorous action" to improve the nation's economy.

Dr. J. Kenneth Galbraith, professor of economics at Harvard University, spoke at a meeting of the American Farm Economic Association.

He recommended this program for improving the economy: Reduce the mortgage rate on housing, ease interest rates; strengthen unemployment compensation and pass area redevelopment legislation; expand the road-building program, and pass a school construction bill.

1960 Ending and Secret of Fatima Seems Destined to Remain Just That

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The year 1960 is ending and the so-called "secret of Fatima" still is secret.

It is generally believed here that Pope John XXIII knows the contents of the envelope that a Portuguese nun entrusted years ago to her bishop with the direction that it be opened in 1960 or at the time of her death if that occurred before then.

Sister Maria Dolores is today a 53-year-old cloistered nun at Coimbra's Carmelite convent in Portugal. She is the only survivor of three peasant children who years ago told of visions of the Virgin Mary — "The Lady in White" — at Fatima.

Speculation has been rife for years on the contents of the envelope.

The major portion of the prophecies that the children attributed to the Virgin has long been known. They involved Soviet Russia. Because of that there has been speculation that the secret portion also concerned Russia.

Already Known

The attitude of church authorities here and in Portugal is that the important portion is already known.

This was the attitude of an article in the Civilta Cattolica, Jesuit fortnightly newspaper whose contents normally are read by the Pope before publication.

The article was entitled "Fatima and its Unrevealed 'Secret,'" with the quotations around the word "secret" obviously intended to minimize it. The point was underlined by the article, which quoted Bishop Joao Pereira Venancio of Leiria, Portugal, who was entrusted with the secret document. He said:

"I am troubled seeing that the portion to be revealed in 1960 is considered to be the major portion of the secret, whereas the most important part is that which is already known."

The revealed portion of the prophecies forecast World War II and told of a possible conversion of Soviet Russia to the Roman Catholic faith. This conversion, however, was conditioned upon prayer and penance and a sincere return of humanity to Christian life.

Urged Prayer

"Otherwise," said Sister Maria the Lady in White warned that "Russia would extend its errors throughout the world, promoting wars and persecutions against the church."

Pope John has never directly referred publicly to the "secret" of Fatima, but he has urged the prayer and penance advocated by the revealed prophecies.

Revelation of the "secret" was anxiously expected and awaited at the annual celebration at the Shrine of Fatima last May. Giacomo Cardinal Lercaro, archbishop of Bologna, attended as the Pope's delegate. Hundreds of thousands of pilgrims waited anxiously.

But the cardinal's address — read because he was ill at the time — dashed cold water on hopes for a revelation. He said:

"We have not come here urged by curiosity to know something about the other secret that the Blessed Virgin has yet reserved for the world; but we came to ask pardon for not having taken into full consideration the maternal admonitions which we already know, but which, it seems, we have forgotten."

Remain Secret

"And that," concluded Civilta Cattolica, "is the message of prayer and of penance, abandonment of sin, return to the friendship of God."

All signs are that the Vatican has permanently put the lid on whatever may remain secret of the prophecies of Fatima. Some here believe that the document has been turned over to the Congregation of the Holy Office, of which the Pope is secretary.

The story of Fatima's now famous shrine began May 13, 1917, the day that Lucia Dos Santos — now Sister Maria — and Giancina and Francesco Marto reported their first vision of a "beautiful Lady in White." This was on a grassy slope near Fatima, a group of huts that then did not even show on Portugal's map.

Soon after that, Giancina and Francesco died, as the "Lady in White" had said they would. Maria has become a trail cloistered Nun.

Fatima has developed into one of the Roman Catholic church's greatest shrines to the Virgin Mary. And the unrevealed portion of the prophecies — with the end of 1960 — appears to be destined for the secret archives of the Vatican.

Suggestions for Extending State School Calendar Poorly Received

Nelson Advocates Adjustments to Accommodate Future Enrollments

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — Suggestions for stretching the costly plant investment at crowded state universities and colleges through extension of the yearly calendar of instruction have been received with a distinct lack of enthusiasm by the administrators of the system.

Gov. Nelson is the leading recent addition to the advocates of the idea that the state may not be able to afford the enormous plant additions that present enrollment trends imply, and that one of the ways to be explored is the two semester system of education as a long term planning in the colleges and universities. The staff report was the work of a joint committee of university and college faculty members.

The objections can be summarized as follows:

1. A longer school calendar can only succeed if the student wants to take advantage of such a longer instruction year, and it would be educationally unsound to compel his attendance during the summer semester "unless it becomes absolutely necessary to do so."

2. A four quarter or three semester system has distinguished from two semesters and the short, voluntary summer term would eliminate many of the adult education and public service programs now provided by the universities and colleges, many of them of "great value for the state." Such programs now use the physical plant of the schools during the summer period to a degree not generally recognized.

Summer Enrollment Up

3. Summer session enrollment is now increasing by the voluntary choice of the student and has served to provide for more efficient utilization of physical plant and staff. Summer enrollment now amounts to about half of the regular term enrollment in the higher education system as a whole. A change in the calendar system would probably reverse that favorable and voluntary trend.

4. Physical space utilization is already efficient under the present schedule, all programs considered, and any improvements should be in the direction of improving the weekly class instruction schedule—including Saturday and evening classroom use.

5. In order to get most benefit from a three semester or four quarter calendar, uniform enrollments will be necessary in each of the sessions.

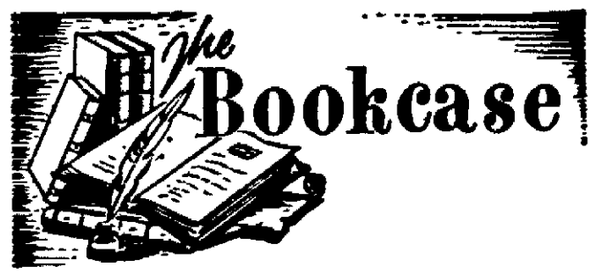

6. A longer school year will cost the state more in teaching and other operating costs.

7. A longer school year would increase the need for student aid programs through scholarships and loans because students attending classes the year around would have reduced opportunities for employment. The loss of summer employment, especially, would be economically hurtful to large numbers of students.

8. A longer school year would reduce "contact time" between student and teacher, shorten examination periods and otherwise "short-change" the student in his quest for counseling, knowledge and direction.

9. A longer school year will create problems in plant maintenance. Much of the renovation and remodeling work is now done during periods of absent or slack enrollment.

The staff report urged collective effort to encourage larger voluntary summer session enrollments, and a study of the possibility of a longer summer term to enable more credit earnings during the period between the regular semesters.

Revolution in Cuba Told From Castro's Viewpoint

By PAUL SANDERS

("Listen Yankee, The Revolution in Cuba," by C. Wright Mills. McGraw Hill, hardbound edition, $3.95. Ballantine paperbound, 50 cents.)

Mills relates at length the argument for Fidel Castro's revolution in Cuba without giving the other side of the case.

The book reads like a collector of Castro's speeches, without the ranting and arm-waving of the bearded left-leaning prime minister.

Mills had long talks in Havana with Castro, President Osvaldo Dorticos, Ernesto Guevara, president of the National Bank of Cuba, and others who are guiding Cuba's nationalization of industry and her agrarian reform.

Their main arguments:

The Cuban revolution was necessary because the country had been crushed under the weight of a combine made up of corrupt politicians and U. S. capital.

The revolution, they say, isn't Communist but purely Cuban. They argue the revolution went as far left as it did because of U. S. opposition to it.

They contend that Cuba took Russian, Red Chinese and satellite support and help because it had to but that the revolutionary leaders won't accept Soviet domination.

Attitude of Leaders

Summing up the attitude of the Castro leaders toward the Cuban Communist party:

"The Communist party of Cuba has never been very large or very strong . . This party did not play any part at all in the making of our revolution . . Our revolution has outdone the Communists on every score . Always at every turn of event and policy, the revolution is always faster than the Cuban Communist party, or individual Communists. In all objective facts then, we are much more radical, much more revolutionary than they. And that is why we are using them, rather than the reverse. . ."

Mills sees the Cuban revolution as essentially one of undernourished, poorly housed, hungry people. The Cuban revolution, he writes, has been "far more thorough, rapid and successful than Mexico's or Bolivia's . . . The Cuban revolution has swiftly destroyed the economic basis of capitalism—both foreign and Cuban."

Others to Come

Mills foresees similar revolutions in other Latin American countries, most of whose people live in conditions as bad or worse than those which prevailed in Cuba.

"The North American public is generally ignorant of the varieties of left-wing thought and activity" in Latin America, he says. "Most of these countries—like the old Cuba — are, in fact, run by an alliance of foreign capital and local interests of the most retrograde character," Mills declares. "In the minds of many intelligent Latin Americans, the United States more often than not stands for political tyranny, economic exploitation, continued impoverishment, and military domination."

Recession Hit Twin Cities Only Lightly in 1960

Employment Office Manager Tells Gain Over Last Year

NEENAH — Expectations predicted for 1960 regarding employment, which had been forecast during the closing months of 1959 and early this year, failed to materialize for the Neenah-Menasha area as well as throughout the country, A. P. Engebretson, manager of the Wisconsin State Employment Service office here, said today.

"However, if the Twin City area suffered from a recession, as many have labeled the general business conditions of 1960, it was mild indeed compared with many other sections of the country," he stated.

"There were no mass layoffs and no mass unemployment such as was experienced in some other highly industrialized areas. Reflecting the high degree of stability in the predominant paper and allied products industries, employment varied little throughout the year, reaching a seasonal peak, as usual, in the late summer and finshing up the year at a slightly higher level than at the end of 1959."

Engebretson said this was one of the few times since the end of World War II that the area has not shown a substantial gain in employment from year to year.

1,841 Found Jobs

Since there was no significant employment gain, placement activities of the Wisconsin State Employment Service office here were substantially lower in 1960 than in 1959. A total of 1,841 found jobs through the local WSES office during the year as compared with 2,257 during 1959.

Of these placements, 473 were in professional, clerical and sales, 164 in skilled and semi-skilled jobs, 620 in unskilled work, 580 in service trades and 95 in domestic and casual labor.

On the other hand, he cited, applicant activity increased in volume. This was not because of any mass unemployment locally but because the reputation for stability of employment in this area continues to attract job seekers living outside the immediate area served by the office.

There were about 3,965 new applications for work received during the year as compared with 3,573 in 1959. During several months, two-thirds of the persons applying were non-residents of the area and for a couple of months the figure ran as high as 75 per cent from outside the area.

School Program

As has been true for the past several years, the employment office manager pointed out, an intensive school program was carried out through which over 500 seniors from the three Twin City high schools were given the general aptitude test battery, interviewed for either permanent or summer employment and given the benefit of employment counseling to assist them in making the transition from school to the world of work.

One of the highlights of the year was the release of a comprehensive study of employment trends for the decade which began this year called "manpower — challenge of the 1960's." These studies in the form of charts showing national and state trends in the composition of the labor force, with emphasis on the changing occupational patterns and age groups during the decade, have been presented in talks to several local groups.

Some of the predictions in this study already have begun to show themselves. It has been anticipated that the greatest increase in workers in the state will be the age group under 25 years of age and that the greatest surge of these new entrants into the labor force will occur in about 1965. This is because of the increased birth rate following the end of World War II.

Locally, Engebretson said, this trend is highlighted by an increase of more than 20 per cent in the enrollment in the senior class of 1961 over that of 1960. From current enrollments in the lower high school grades, this increasing trend of graduates entering the labor market is expected to continue for the next several years.

This increase in the number of young workers entering the labor force is not in itself alarming because the demand for workers is also expected to increase enough to absorb them, he continued. However, the changing occupational patterns do present a real challenge.

The scientific age in which this country is living is creating a greater demand for professional, scientific and technically trained persons. This means that a greater number of high school graduates will have to go on to college to be trained for their future responsibilities.

"But since the over-all trend is for an increase in demand for white collar workers, skilled tradesmen and technicians and a decrease in the number of unskilled workers, it also means that a greater number of young people not going to college will have to be trained in skills that will be needed whether by formal apprenticeship or by informal on-the-job training," Engebretson cited.

"An increasing number of young men returning from service are asking for job possibilities where such training opportunities are available.

"The real challenge that faces all of us in the years ahead is to match the interest, aptitude and potential of our young people to the changing needs of our times and give them the training that will equip them to take their rightful places in our society and work force," he concluded.

Hearing Set Tuesday on Assessments

Council to Decide On Street Charges; Citizens May Object

MENASHA — Residents will have an opportunity to voice their opinions on special assessments for street seal coating at a public hearing Tuesday night at 7 p.m. in the Menasha city council chambers.

The hearing was called after City Atty. Richard J. Steffens ruled that special assessments made by the city for seal coating work done were illegal.

Special notices of the hearing have been mailed to Menasha residents who were billed by the city for the work done. Citizens were advised not to pay the bills until a ruling has been made.

As a result of the public hearing the common council either will amend, cancel or confirm the assessments. If the assessments are cancelled, refunds totaling about $1,200 will be made to people who have already paid the charges.

Ales First Candidate For City Treasurer

Quest for Post Official With Filing Of Nominations With Menasha Clerk

MENASHA — First of six announced candidates to file completed nomination papers was Arthur J. Ales, who seeks the treasurer's post.

Ales

Ales Friday afternoon made himself an official candidate by filing the papers with City Clerk Harry H. Kind.

Ales, of 833 Appleton St., is the Menasha police justice. He has served in that post since it was formed in 1941, and was a justice of the peace five years before that.

He has been employed 28 years by Gilbert Paper Co. and plans to retire from that firm if elected treasurer.

The treasurers post will be vacated next April with the retirement of the incumbent, Frank Beck.

Other candidates, none of whom has filed papers, are W. W. Edwards, Beck's deputy; Franklin Fahrenkrug, police captain; Everett Luebben, automotive parts employe; John LeMaire, former Elks Club manager; and E. E. Glomstead, retired.

Even if six or more candidates file for the treasurer's post, no city primary election will be necessary. The candidate with the most votes in the April 4 election will win.

W. F. Snyder Sales Head Of Curwood

NEW LONDON — William Snyder, Menasha, who recently resigned from his position with Marathon Division of American Can Co., has been appointed as of Jan. 1 as sales manager of Curwood, Inc., according to Howard Curler, president.

"Snyder has had considerable experience in the development and sales of specialty, flexible, packaging materials and will be a valuable addition to the Curwood staff," Curler said.

He will have prime responsibility for increasing sales of packaging materials in this area for Curwood.

Snyder and his family plan to stay in their present home in Menasha.

2nd Candidate Seeks Post

Burton Takes Out Papers for Ninth Ward Alderman Job

NEENAH — An aldermanic race has apparently developed in Neenah's Ninth Ward as a second man has taken out nomination papers in the ward.

Cliff Burton, 44, 317 Bellin St., took out papers Friday afternoon from City Clerk R. V. Hauser. Robert Leonard, 1057 Campbell St., had previously filed his nomination papers.

They will be seeking the post held by Ald. Paul Hansen who has announced he will not run for re-election.

This will be Burton's second try for the Ninth Ward post. He was defeated by Hansen in 1958, running second in a three-way contest.

Burton is married and has five children. He is assistant superintendent of materials handling at the Kimberly-Clark Corp. Neenah Mill.

The only other announced candidate in Neenah is Darrelle Verkuilen, 800 Main St., who has taken out papers for alderman.

Neenah Policeman Warner Sorensen strains to open the door of one of the vehicles involved in a two-car crash at 11:47 p.m. Friday on Highway 114 in the town of Neenah in which three young Neenah-Menasha people died. William Tiffany, 22, 205 Second St., Menasha, was still pinned in the wreckage above. Two 19-year-old rural Neenah girls, Kay Spiegelberg, Route 2, and Ruth Ann Schultz, Route 1, were in the other vehicle. All three were dead on arrival at Theda Clark Hospital, bringing Winnebago County's 1960 traffic toll to 26 and the state total to 913, both far above last year's totals.

Bears Have Lease

YELLOWSTONE PARK, Mont. (AP) — A black mother bear and two cubs have taken a season's lease on a steam-heated "apartment" in Yellowstone Park.

Unspoken-for Males Give Views on Marriage as Leap Year Bounces Out

AP Newsfeatures

Leap Year is bouncing out. And with it goes the last chance single women will have for 1,460 days to step right up and hurl the lasso.

As last minute encouragement to the ladies still in there swinging, here are the names and view of six still-unencumbered males.

The young stalwarts:

Edd Byrnes, television's Kookie actor; Gardner McKay, star of "Adventure in Paradise" TV series; Sal Mineo, movie actor who breaks away from teenage parts in "Exodus"; Bob Newhart, button-down comic; Rod Taylor, Australian - born star of "Hong Kong" TV series; Robert Webber, who plays a nervous young groom in Tennessee Williams' "Period of Adjustment" on Broadway.

Why Haven't You Married?

Byrnes: "It's very simple. I like being single."

McKay: . . ."I'm not ready yet for marriage which probably is another way of saying I haven't really found the woman I'm looking for."

Mineo: "Because I'm concerned with my career at this point."

Newhart: "Until two years ago I couldn't afford it. I was too poor. Since then I haven't had time to meet anyone I might be interested in because I've been traveling."

Taylor: ". . .I have a lot of work to do and I feel that I have a lot of problems to work out. I give all of my time to 'Hong Kong.' This is a marriage in itself when I'm doing the show seven days a week. To impose these problems on a wife sitting at home waiting to be flattered on her new dress or something is not a part of my immediate life."

Webber: "Nobody has asked me."

What Are You Looking For in a Wife?

Byrnes: "Love, understanding, loyalty, beauty, intelligence, maturity and lots of laughs."

McKay: "The woman I think I'll marry must be three people—a woman, a lady and a girl.

"I mean that she should like womanly things and stand up for what she believes as a woman.

"She should be someone who always will be young, which is what I mean by her being a girl.

"By being a lady I mean she must have maturity, dignity and grace. She should be almost patrician.

"She should. . .know when to speak, and listen. . .be considerate, courteous, not too demanding."

Mineo: "The most important thing is that she should understand show business, though not necessarily as a professional herself. She should be somebody that won't be unhappy at my making love to someone else on the stage or screen and somebody who understands show business hours."

Newhart: "A person in whom I could find love and compassion. Since I've had some success I've realized how much I need someone to share my happiness."

Taylor: "I like girls who are fairly active and fairly thinking. I want a wife with whom I can share communication on more than one level. I need a wife to talk to who at least is interested in thinking about life, in learning and living and seeking."

Webber: "Reciprocity about sums it up. Femininity, a girl who's interested in a home and family, not ambitious for a career."

Have You Been Proposed to This Leap Year?

Byrnes: ". . .This is Leap Year?"

McKay: "I get a number of proposals every week. That's a great compliment to a guy, isn't it?"

Mineo: "No, except for some proposals in fan letters."

Newhart: "No."

Taylor: "Yeah. I've been proposed to, but I'm not kissing and telling."

Webber: "No."

What are Your General Views on Marriage?

Byrnes: "Broad."

Mineo: "I believe wholeheartedly in it and want only one wife, for good. For me there'll be no fly-by-night type of wedding."

Newhart: "I'm in favor of it."

Webber: "At best it can be wonderful. It can be unfortunate. I think it's the only way to live."

(McKay and Taylor abstained.)

9,580 Acres To be Kept Out Of Production

OSHKOSH — Conservation reserve contracts will keep 9,580 acres of cropland in Winnebago County out of production in 1961, says Thomas C. Webster, county Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation (ASC) office manager.

In the county, contracts will expire today on 504 acres of land. Land emerging from conservation reserve may be kept idle for twice the number of years under the contract, as provided by a new law. ASC officials hope the new law will encourage farmers to keep former allotment crop acreage in vegetative cover, such as grass, after contracts expire.

Nationally, contracts expire today on about 90,000 acres, leaving 28.6 million acres in the reserve until the end of 1961.

The land still under contract may not be cropped or used for grazing during the contract terms. Annual payments are made at the close of crop seasons.

Winnebago County wool producers received $5,869.25 in incentive payments on their wool and $1,044.92 on unshorn lambs under the wool payment program, announced Henry Malchow, chairman of the Winnebago County ASC committee.

Average payments amounted to $47.65 for wool and $20.90 for lambs. Seventy-seven county farmers are in the wool program.

Menasha High Alumni Squad Nips Bluejays On Late Free Throws

Three Charity Tosses by Gordy Selbach Give Grads 78-77 Win in Final Seconds

BY DON CASTONIA
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

MENASHA — Three free throws by Gordy Selbach in the last 45 seconds on the game gave an Alumni team a 78-77 win over the Menasha Bluejays in the first annual Alumni game at the Menasha High School Gym Friday night.

After leading most of the way, the Alumni had to battle back from a four point deficit with a minute and a half to go to win. Selbach scored the last five points for the Alumni team, composed of graduates from 1956 to 1959.

Selbach, who graduated in 1958, hit on a corner set shot to make the score 77-75 in favor of the varsity and then dropped in three straight free throws as he was fouled twice by Bill Gerhard.

Missed Shot

The Bluejays' final chance to win was snuffed out when a jump by Bill Prange with eight seconds left to play rimmed in and out of the basket.

The grads threatened to make the game a runaway several times in the first half but each time the varsity battled back into contention.

After the Bluejays finally caught up late in the third quarter the score was tied nine times before Selbach dropped in his winning free throw.

Bill Ritchie triggered the varsity comeback, scoring all 17 of his points in the second half and 11 of them in the third quarter.

Take Lead

After trading baskets early in the first quarter, the alumni jumped into the lead on two free throws by Selbach and two baskets by Bob Prange, brother of the Bluejays' Bill. The grads ran their lead to nine points, 20-11 before baskets by Pete Lavalle and John Matowitz cut the margin to 20-15 at the end of the quarter.

A fresh quintet continued the attack for the alumni in the second period as they built their biggest lead of the game, a 10-point margin at 29-29. Tom Stepanski and John Hidde led the second quarter assault for the grads.

A team composed of MHS reserves, led by Clay Miller, reduced the margin to six points at the half, 43-37.

Score Tied

A cold third quarter almost spelled doom for the alumni as the Bluejays, paced by Ritchie who saw little action in the first half, chipped away at the alumni lead until Ritchie tied the game at 54-54 with a short jump shot. The teams traded baskets as the quarter ended.

Menasha took the lead in the fourth period for the first time since the early moments of the game on a drive play by Ritchie. Lavalle gave the varsity a four-point lead on a corner jump shot but two baskets by Bob Prange tied the score at 61-all.

The varsity had several opportunities to break the game open in the final minutes, twice opening up four point leads, but each time alumni came back to tie the score.

Balanced Attack

Selbach came on to do his heroics after Matowitz gave the Bluejays a 77-75 lead with 1:35 left to play.

Bob Prange led a balanced scoring attack for the alumni with 16 points on seven baskets and two free throws. He was followed by Selbach with 14, Harry Hass, 12 and Stepanski, 9 points.

Ritchie topped all scorers with his 17 points. Matowitz was the only other varsity player to score in the double figures getting 15 points of six baskets and three charity tosses.

Matowitz, counted on by Coach Massey at the beginning of the year, was playing his first game of the season. He injured his elbow last fall and has been sidelined since.

Mother Needs 1 Son More for Ball Team

DETROIT (AP) — Margaret Reese, 25, gave birth this week to her eighth son.

The oldest is 8. She told newsmen she had a boy's name all picked out—Christopher. She and her husband, Daniel, 27, a cab driver, still have a girl's name—Margaret Pauline — picked out from when they were expecting their first child.

"One more and we'll have enough for a baseball team," Mrs. Reese remarked.

1960 Sports Roundup

Zephyr Title, Coaching Changes At MHS Among Top Local Stories

BY GEORGE MANCOSKY
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

NEENAH — The local sports season got off to a rousing start early last January when Neenah came from an 11-point deficit in the last 2½ minutes to defeat Appleton and this first year of the sixties continued to produce excitement throughout.

No. 1 story of 1960 undoubtedly was St. Mary's conquest of Racine St. Catherine for the state Catholic High school basketball championship. The Zephyrs had a sparkling 25-1 record.

Big news last spring was the realigning of coaching assignments at Menasha High in which head coaches in four sports were relieved of their jobs and their positions assigned to members of the physical education staff.

Another headliner was the ascension of Chet Bland as king of Northeastern Wisconsin Amateur golfers, winning the tourney last July at Ridgeway, his home course.

2 Rocket Losses

To many teams losing football games is an every week occurrence but not at Neenah. It was news this year when the Rockets lost two games for the first time since 1951 and suffered their first defeat at home since 1953. They recovered to win their last five.

The Neenah baseball team rose to unexpected tournament heights and was eliminated just one game away from the state tourney.

Bowlers recorded some of the peak totals in history, including 278-689 by Janet Runge, a 776 by Jim Kluba, "Rocky" Monty's 760 and Arnie Zuelke's 299 game.

The Menasha Junior Legion won the regional meet and missed qualifying for the state tournament by one game. Green Bay, the team which eliminated the locals, took the state crown. Neenah resumed Legion competition after two years.

Macs Win Title

The Menasha Macs, after several years of dethronement, again reigned as monarch of the Fox Valley League. They lost to Little Chute - Kimberly in the finals of the district semi-pro tournament which was played here.

Menasha's Diane Gilbertson was one of the state's brightest young tennis stars and was selected on the 5-girl Junior Wightman team. Mike Lintner won the 880 run in record time in the state class A track meet. In tennis, Neenah's Dick Wilson and Doug Ankerson copped the state high school doubles crown and Jim Stenson of Menasha was a finalist in singles.

Tom Wiesner, co-captain and most valuable on the Wisconsin football team, was chosen for the East-West game and was drafted by Baltimore. Herb Roedel was a regular on Marquette's last football team and Dick Montonati was co-captain of the Ripon College griders.

Scoring Champ

Ron Dibelius of Oshkosh State was the state college conference scoring champion and he and Fred Seggelink of Stout were all-league selections. Dibelius was ruled out of competition earlier this month when the league adopted a no-professional rule.

Tom Hadley shared golfing honors with Bland, winning the Fox Cities, Neenah - Menasha and Ridgeway crowns. Ridgeway pro Bob Below took the Northeastern Wisconsin PGA title.

Neenah's tennis team was unbeaten in 11 straight matches and the Rocket track squad lost the Mid-Eastern Conference title to Two Rivers by a half point.

Other Championships

St. Mary won the only state crown speared by the locals and the Zephyrs also took the basketball title in addition to state honors. Menasha tied with Clintonville and Kaukauna for Mid-East baseball honors, Neenah took the Valley frosh basketball and track buntings and St. Mary was second in the state Catholic tennis meet and won the conference championship.

Oshkosh copped the Menasha regional basketbal tourney; West Green Bay, the Neenah sectional; Hewitt's was the BABA champion and the Macs, first round winners in the Eastern Wisconsin League.

Other Honors

A rainy spring resulted in a rash of athletic postponements and forced the Neenah Nodaway Yacht Club to postpone its start until June. W. R. Kellett was first in the ILYA class A invitational regatta here.

Additional state honors included closed tennis tourney crowns by Barbara Wirth, Dick Wilson and Alice Kenney and an open meet title by the latter. Jack Schnitzer won a number of outboard racing championships and Madison Edgewood was first in the state Catholic High school baseball tournament here.

The year also saw the organization of a Little League Baseball program in Menasha. The Menasha Extension became the UW-Fox Valley Center and now plays its basketball games in Appleton. In softball, Banta's not only repeated as Industrial League titlist but also copped the Labor Day tourney.

Bernie Lang Hits 518 Set, 210 Singleton

MENASHA — Bernie Lang thumped a 518 set in the Fox Valley Women's League No. 1 section Thursday at Mid-Town with a top singleton of 210. She also had a 186 line. Jane Coenraad speared runnerup honors with a 192 game and 499 total. There were no individual honor scores in the second section of league action.

Earl Litho keglers have a comfortable lead of five games in the first section with a 32-16 mark. The second-place Gressler team is a pair of games ahead of two third place squads.

Schrage Sheet Metal has only a lead of two games in the second section, posting a 31-17 record. Sommer's Conoco has 29-19 to hold second by half a game over the Alex Bar squad.

Pontiff Voices Need for Peace

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John XXIII spoke Thursday of the anxiety in his heart concerning international peace. But he said he preferred to approach the new year by looking ahead "to that which invites faith and hope."

The 79-year-old head of the Roman Catholic Church spoke to the diplomatic corps accredited to the Vatican. He said it was an old habit of his on the dawn of a new year to seek "always to find in the uncertainty of an agitated world some glimmer promising serenity."

With the hope of promoting social peace, he announced that he will issue a document in 1961 marking the 70th anniversary of the "rerum novarum" encylical of Pope Leo XIII, setting forth Christian principles on relations between capital and labor.

In his speech at the special new year's audience for the diplomats, the Pope expressed concern over internal strife in various countries as well as anxiety over international peace.

Big Second Half Brings Vikes Win Over Elmhurst

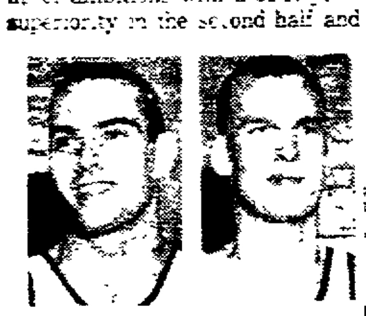

Lawrence Trails, 29-28, at Break; Ripon Beats Foresters

BY JOHN L. PAUSTIAN
Post-Crescent Sports Editor

At the halftime break Friday night, Elmhurst College had reason to doubt the potency of Lawrence's new winning complex in basketball.

The Bluejays led 29-28 after 20 minutes of play and their chances for an even split in the Lawrence Holiday Festival appeared pretty good.

stormed to their third straight victory, 59-45—the school's longest hardcourt success streak in a half-dozen years.

Match 1959-60 Output

Jim Rasmussen and Jim Schulze blazed in nine of the Vikes' 13 post - intermission baskets as they showed the way to Lawrence's fifth win in eight starts, a victory total that matches their entire 1959-60 output.

In last night's opener at Alexander Gym, Ripon took an 89-85 overtime decision from Lake Forest. The two Wisconsin quintets thus made a clean sweep of their 2-night, 4 - game series against the Illinois tourists.

Though no championship was at stake in the holiday event, many will regard the Jan. 14 Ripon-at-Lawrence Midwest Conference game as a delayed settlement of supremacy.

After a close first half, in which the lead changed hands seven times, Lawrence went ahead, 30-29, on Loren Wolf's rebound basket in the first 34 seconds of the final period and stayed in command permanently.

Six Fast Points

Wolf immediately added another two points on a sweeping hook shot and completed a 1-minute, 13-second splurge with two free throws that gave Lawrence a 34-29 edge. The artistic shotmaker from Shawano momentarily began a long bench respite because of four fouls.

But Rasmussen, Schulze and Joe Lamers finished the job Wolf started with five, four and two baskets, respectively, in the remainder of the second half.

Wolf's game-long total of 16 points gave him scoring honors for the second successive night, and he also proved the second best rebounder behind Lamers, a broad-shouldered backboard battler.

Schulze pumped in seven baskets (six of them from the outside) in 13 shots for runnerup point honors and played another elegant floor game. Rasmussen and Lamers also contributed heavily to the Vikes' balanced offense with 13 points each. Lamers meshed six of 11 floor attempts in his best shooting performance of the season.

Elmhurst's Dick Luzette duplicated his Thursday night showing

Badgers Lose Third Straight In Tourney

Washington State Pockets 78-72 Win For Seventh Place

PORTLAND, Ore. —(AP)— Wisconsin's basketball team lost its third game in a row in the Far West Classic Basketball Tournament and finished last with its 78-72 defeat at the hands of Washington State.

The Badgers fought point - for-point in the first half as the score was tied nine times and the lead changed hands as many times.

The victory gave Washington State a seventh place finish. Washington State completed the tournament with a 1-2 record and 3-7 for the season. Wisconsin's tourney record was 0-3 and put the season mark at 3-6.

The Cougars ended the first half with a 39-38 margin but opened it to 51-41 with the second half only five minutes old. The winners held a 15-point edge at one point—62-47—but the Badgers narrowed the gap to six at the end of the game.

Terry Ball led the scoring for the winners with 20 points, followed by Dwight Damon with 18. Dick Dutrisac and Pat Richter each had 14 for the Badgers.

In other tournament games, Wisconsin lost to Oregon State 56-54 and 79-71 to Portland in overtime.

Colts Sign Tom Matte to 1961 Pact

BALTIMORE (AP)—The Baltimore Colts announced Friday night they had signed back Tom Matte of Ohio State, their No. 1 draft pick to a National Football League contract.

Matte, fifth draft choice of the New York Titans in the rival American Football League, was listed to start at quarterback for the East and against the West today in the Shrine All-Star game at San Francisco.

The Colts are hoping the 6-foot 190-pound Buckeye will help them as a halfback.

Texans and Cowboys to Renew Feud

DALLAS (AP)— The Dallas Texans and the Dallas Cowboys have been ordered to renew their off-the-gridiron rivalry this spring—in a courtroom.

Judge Dick Dixon, head of the 5th Civil Court of Appeals, ruled Friday that the Cowboys' contract battle with Texan defensive star Jimmy Harris will go another round March 3.

Harris, a former member of the National Football League's Los Angeles Rams, was traded to the Cowboys in July. The Dallas NFL entry swapped its fifth choice at the recent league draft meeting for the former Oklahoma quarterback.

Hawkeye Five Takes Los Angeles Classic

Iowa's surprising Hawkeyes more than made up for the rest of the Big Ten basketball teams which suffered in West Coast tournaments this week by slamming UCLA 79-65 Friday night to win the Los Angeles Basketball Classic title.

Fighting from behind most of the way and trailing 38-34 at the half, the Hawkeyes battled back early in the second half and went ahead to stay, 48-47, on a basket by Don Nelson.

Nelson pumped in 26 points, giving him a tournament record of 72 in three games and breaking the mark of 65 set by All-America Jerry West of West Virginia last year.

Wisconsin Loses

Iowa not given much of a chance in the Big Ten this season by pre-season dopesters has won six in a row and has an 8-1 record. The Hawkeyes were the only Western Conference representatives with a victory over non-conference opposition Friday.

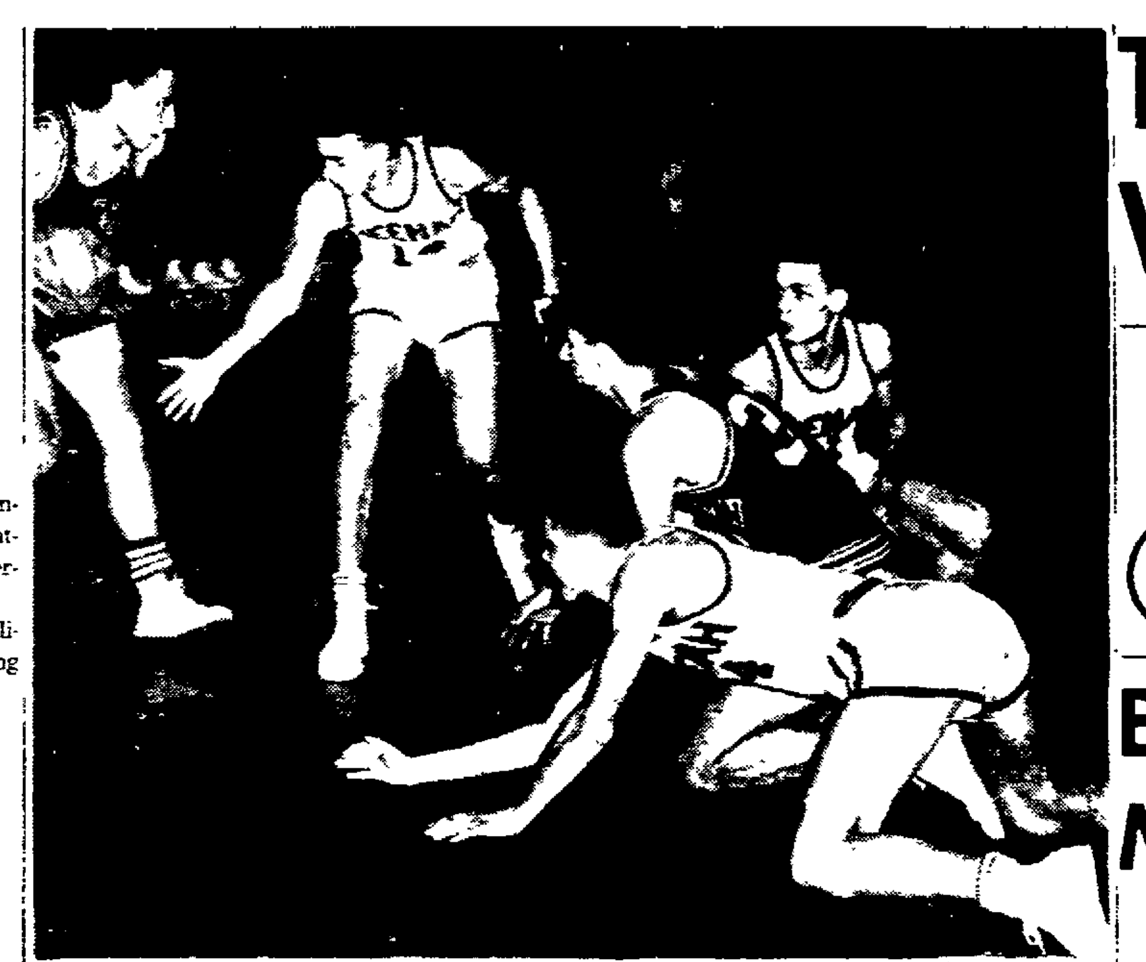

Indiana folded before Southern Cal, 90-71, to lose out for third place in the Los Angeles Classic, while Minnesota whipped Michigan State 83-77, in the battle for seventh place. Wisconsin lost to Washington State 78-72, and finished last in the Far West Classic at Portland.

Buckeyes Favored

Although Big Ten teams are barely managing to stay ahead of non-league opponents for the season, 42-40, there's a good chance that another title will be bagged by a conference representative in New York tonight.

Ohio State's Buckeyes undefeated and top-ranked nationally, meet undefeated St. Bonaventure for the New York Holiday Festival title. The Buckeyes are favored by nine points despite having to come from far behind to defeat St. John's in semifinal competition Thursday.

In other action tonight, Northwestern is host to Notre Dame.

Navy Is 1-TD Underdog in Orange Bowl

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Minnesota's national football champions are cast in the role of favorites today along with Missouri, Mississippi and Arkansas in the nation's top four bowl games.

The Golden Gophers, led by guard Tom Brown and a power-packed backfield, are favored to whip Washington by one touchdown. This, however, is virtually the same Washington team which humiliated Wisconsin, 44-8, last year.

Missouri rates as a one touchdown favorite over Navy in the Orange Bowl at Miami; Mississippi figures by at least a touchdown over Rice in New Orleans' Sugar Bowl, and defense-minded Arkansas ranks 10 points better than Rice in pre-game odds for the Cotton Bowl at Dallas.

Nearly a quarter of a million persons will attend the four games, with the Pasadena Classic drawing the biggest crowd—103,000. Another 81,000 are expected to attend the Sugar Bowl, while the Orange and Cotton bowls should attract about 75,000 each.

Kennedy on Hand

Among those expected to attend the Orange Bowl will be President-elect John F. Kennedy. Kennedy, a Navy veteran of World War II, probably will be pulling for the Middies and their All-America back, Joe Bellino.

Although Brown has been named All-America and lineman of the year, he gets a lot of help from center Greg Larson, tackles Frank Brixius and Bob Bell and Bob Deegan.

Washington will counter with team speed and the passing of Bob Hivner and Bob Schloredt. Schloredt, one of the nation's top stars last year, missed the final six games of the season because of a shoulder separation. He has been passing and running and again could provide the day's big upset.

Bowl Jinx

Missouri must overcome a bowl jinx and the running of Bellino to come out victorious. The Tigers have lost six post-season games. They'll key their defenses to Bellino. If they stop the Navy torpedo, the Tigers could win with ease.

Balance and depth brought Mississippi along undefeated. The only blot on the Rebel record was a 6-6 tie with LSU. Quarterback Jake Gibbs is an excellent passer and makes the most of Mississippi's quarterback-fullback offense. Fullbacks Hoss Anderson and Billy Ray Adams are the club's top ground gainers.

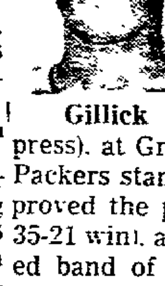

Rice is predominantly a running team although the Owls have an excellent quarterback in Billy Cox. Of all the touchdowns scored against Rice, only five have come on sustained drives.

Arkansas has defense, defense and more defense and appears to be too much for Duke's Blue Devils, who ended the season by losing the last two games. Arkansas held five of its ten opponents without a touchdown.

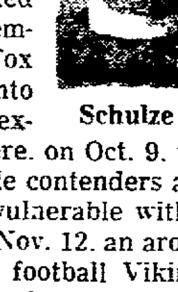

NOTES and NOTIONS

John L. Paustian

As I anticipate eye-witnessing sports events of 1961, I can't help wondering which locales will produce the most unforgettable drama. In the year just ending, this chronicler found his bonus helpings of thrills and suspense at Goodland Field (where, on July 31, the Foxes' Chuck Symeon and Pat Gillick double-blanked Burlington to turn a temporarily - sputtering Fox Cities baseball machine into a runaway pennant express), at Green Bay City Stadium (where, on Oct. 9, the Packers stamped themselves as bonafide contenders and proved the previously-unbeaten Colts vulnerable with a 35-21 win), at Whiting Field (where, on Nov. 12, an aroused band of Jim Schulze-led Lawrence football Vikings stunned league champion St. Olaf, 20-16), in the Menasha High gym (where, on March 5, surprising Oshkosh High ended a fighting Kaukauna basketball team's regional championship hopes, 67-66), at Ridgeway Country Club (where, on June 26, perennial Fox Cities golf champion Don Strutz missed, by a whisker, a 3-foot, final-hole putt that would have sent him into a playoff with new titlist Tom Hadley) and at Fond du Lac High School (where, on Dec. 9, Appleton High's Dick Rankin eased home two free throws in the final 27 seconds to decide a spectacular shooting duel, 75-74). Packer Stadium was also the site of a high school grid masterpiece Oct. 7 as Green Bay West came from behind to beat AHS, 14-13, on a 55-yard run by Al Reichwald and a PAT by Ron Schafer to begin its march to the state's No. 1 ranking.

Gillick

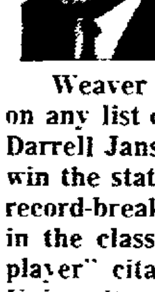

Schulze

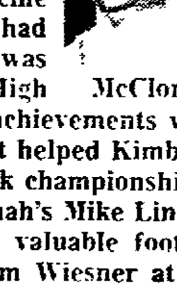

Of the multitude of blue-ribbon sports attractions offered on television, this viewer found these most engrossing: the ninth-inning, seventh game homer by Pittsburgh's Bill Mazeroski that beat New York in the World Series, the U. S. Olympic hockey team's victory over Russia and Iowa's last-minute 28-21 football win over Wisconsin.

The Fox Cities' teams of the year were the Foxes (who ended the area's half-century pro baseball pennant famine by annexing the Three-I League championship under the direction of Manager Earl Weaver) and the St. Mary basketball Zephyrs (who, under Coach Ralph McClone, won the state Catholic title with a 32-30 finals victory over Racine St. Catherine, which had been unbeaten and was touted as unbeatable. High on any list of outstanding individual achievements were Darrell Jansen's three first places that helped Kimberly win the state high school Class B track championship; a record-breaking half-mile run by Neenah's Mike Lintner in the class A track meet; the "most valuable football player" citation won by Neenah's Tom Wiesner at the University of Wisconsin; the all-conference rating earned by Lawrence (and Kaukauna) end Joe Lamers; and the victory by Neenah's Chet Bland over state-champ-to-be Steve Smith in the championship match of the NEWGA tournament.

NEENAH—Striking for the last eight points of the first quarter and 10 of the first 12 that were scored in the second, Appleton built up a good cushion on its way to a 76-62 win over Neenah in their non-conference encounter here Friday night.

The victory, the Terrors' sixth in eight starts, in part avenged the heart-breaking loss suffered to the Rockets in the very first game of 1960. In said tangle, the Red and White came from an 11-point deficit in the last 2½ minutes to escape with a 72-71 win.

The hosts trailed by 13 points with about the same amount of time left Friday night but were unable to duplicate their effort of 361 days ago and were tagged with their fourth reverse in eight games.

Although Appleton was in charge of the situation from late in the first period on, it couldn't pull comfortably away until midway in the final stanza.

13-Point Margin

The Terrors led by margins up to 13 points at various times in the second, third and fourth quarters yet with 5:35 in the game only held a 6-point advantage as Neenah fought back to hit seven of the first nine points racked up in the last frame.

With the score 56-50, Appleton's Al Vandenberg dropped in his only point of the night and shortly thereafter Pete Treiber, who was in the Rockets' hair all night, stole the ball from a Neenah ball handler and dribbled more than half the length of the court for an easy basket and a 9-point spread. The verdict wasn't in doubt after that.

Final Neenah Lead

Neenah's last lead was 13-10 in the fading minutes of the first quarter. Marty Schultz hit on a jump shot. Treiber pounded home two straight, the first giving the Terrors a 14-13 lead, and Jerry Gendron connected on a jumper for an 18-13 score at the quarter.

The victors made the first three points of the second frame before Paul Felton tipped in a rebound to break the Neenah scoring dearth. The Terrors then added a string of seven for a 28-15 lead.

Neenah worked to get the difference down to five (34-29) with a skein of eight, six by the talented Felton, but Schultz's goal with 38 seconds remaining in the period put the Terrors in front 36-29 at halftime.

11-Point Advantage

Jeff Martin and Treiber contributed solo baskets to inaugurate third period action and the visitors managed to maintain that 11-point advantage (54-43) at the quarter's conclusion.

Neenah only made two baskets

Warriors Erase 10-0 Deficit To Trail Just 38-36 at Half

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Marquette's second half scoring surge failed to stop Duke's Blue Devils Friday night and the Warriors suffered an 86-73 loss in the semi-finals of the Dixie Classic Basketball Tournament.

The Warriors were behind 10-0 before they scored, then rallied to tie at 36-36 and trailed 38-36 at halftime.

With four minutes of the second half gone, Duke was leading 48-41 when Marquette came up with scoring spree, tied the count and pulled ahead on a field goal by Len Jefferson with 11:20 remaining.

Duke, the No. 6 ranked team in the nation, then caught fire again with sophomore Art Heyman leading the way to a gap of 12 points and swept on to win. Heyman took scoring honors with 29 points. Don Kojis led Marquette with 21.

Marquette's front running position lasted only for seconds as Howie Hurt of Duke tied it up and Doug Kistler put the defending Atlantic Coast Conference champions back on top for good at 57-56.

It was the ninth victory in a row for Duke and put the Blue Devils in the tournament finals tonight against its old Rival, North Carolina. Marquette will be going for third place in a contest with Villanova and Wake Forest and North Carolina State fight for the consolation crown.

Favor Houston In Title Game

25,000 Expected For AFL's First Championship Tilt

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—The Los Angeles Chargers, losers in Houston's first American Football League game, worked out today with hopes of closing the season with an upset victory.

The Chargers and the Houston Oilers meet in the AFL's first championship game Sunday before an expected 25,000 persons and a national television audience —ABC, 2:30 p. m. CST. Houston is a 6½ point favorite.

The Chargers lost to Houston, 38-28, in the Oilers' first league home game in September and won, 24-21, on a muddy field in Los Angeles later.

The Chargers, with 10-4 record, won the league's Western Division. Houston, also 10-4, won the Eastern Division

Sid Gillman, Los Angeles coach, brings the best-balanced team in the AFL into the game.

The Chargers weren't tops in any of the league's six-team statistical categories, but they never were worse than fourth in any department.

The Los Angeles hopes depend on the passing of Jack Kemp, the AFL's top passer, the running of Paul Lowe, Ben Agajanian's kicking, and defensive work of Ron Botchan, Emil Karas, Ronnie Loudd, Dick Harris and Jim Sears.

HAVANA — Ultiminio Ramos, Cuba, knocked out Chato Gomez, Mexico, 9 featherweight.

Allen-Bradley overcame an early deficit, zoomed to a 49-44 lead at halftime and led the rest of the way. Bill Kuse of Stevens Point was high point man with 25 and Bill Sarver paced the winners with 23.

Winona and Stout were tied 28-28 at halftime and the score was tied four times in the final three minutes before Winona took the lead and victory. Winona's Lyle Papenfuss had 23 points and Gary Simonson 21 for Stout.

The Little Things Hurt

Packer-Eagle Game Is History, But Re-Plays Go on and on

BY ART DALEY
Post-Crescent News Service

GREEN BAY — The Packer-Eagle championship is history by only five days but it's still the biggest re-play in our town's football history.

If you haven't played this one over and over, you just haven't lived. . try any corner downtown. Folks are still marveling how easy it can be to lose a game and how hard it can be to win a game. Look here:

The Packers lost on a ridiculously small amount of offensive success by the Eagles (17-13).

Four passes, a 58-yard kickoff return, and a short 39-yard drive beat Green Bay out of the world title.

The four passes came within 3 minutes and 8 seconds of the second quarter after the Packers had taken a 6-0 lead.

The first two produced a touchdown, Norm Van Brocklin throwing to Tommy McDonald for 22 yards to the Packer 35. The next involved the same battery and went for 35 stripes and the touchdown for a 7-6 lead

The Eagles then drove for a field goal in eight plays and two were healthy passes — Van Brocklin to Pete Retzlaff for 41 and Van to Ted Dean for 22 to the Packer 8. Van Brocklin kept on throwing but the Bays rushed him into three incompletions and Bob Walston kicked a 15-yard field goal for a 10-6 score at 11:48.

Other than a drive that ended with John Symank's interception in the end zone, the Eagles didn't budge again until Dean's runback of the kickoff following a touchdown that gave Green Bay a 13-10 lead . . . The Eagles scored in eight plays from 39 yards out.

12 Tough Games

The Packers defense went through 12 murderous league games and allowed an average of 17.4 points per showing . . . They gave the Eagles 17 under the toughest kind of circumstances—a championship game. They were faced with the John Unitas of the Eastern division, only more so. Van Brocklin is a coach, too. The defense's job Monday had to be considered just 17 points shy of being perfect. You can't get much better than that in a title game.

Battle to Keep Rose Bowl Rivalry

Football Leaders at Pasadena Hope to Patch Differences

PASADENA, Calif. (AP)—Powerful Big Ten football figures are seeking here to head off a total rupture in the 14-year-old Rose Bowl rivalry between the Big Ten and the Far West.

A few indicated privately they were jolted by what they consider a hard line taken by commissioner Tom Hamilton of the Western Big Five.

Hamilton three days ago reaffirmed the Big Five's intention to pick the nation's top-ranked team as the eastern representative, whether or not it happened to be from the Big Ten.

This is the Big Five's policy, he said, in view of the Big Ten's failure to renew the Rose Bowl contract.

One Big Ten official said this amounted to a "defiant" attitude, jeopardizing a long and profitable Big Ten-Pacific Coast tradition in the Rose Bowl.

A battery of Big Ten spokesmen saluted the Rose Bowl Friday as one of the nation's great sports spectacles and "the best bowl game in the land."

The Ultimate Goal

Biggie Munn, onetime Minnesota playing star, former Michigan State coach and now Michigan State athletic director, told more than 3,000 persons at the annual kickoff luncheon:

"I hope the Big Ten and the Pacific Coast see fit to get together on a long pact."

The Rose Bowl, he said, is the ultimate goal of players and coaches alike in the Big Ten.

Big Ten Rose Bowl advocates drew further support from first-year president O. Meredith Wilson of Minnesota, a warm friend of the Tournament of Roses. Minnesota, he said, would go away with great respect for the Rose Bowl game and the manner in which it is conducted.

Wilson was president of the University of Oregon when Oregon played Ohio State in the bowl three years ago. Rose Bowl backers at Minnesota — one of the historic foes of post-season football games — are hoping Wilson can alter the school faculty's position. The Minnesota faculty is still opposed to any continuing Big Ten involvement in post season games.

Hamilton, speaking briefly at the luncheon, said the Big Five is happy to have the No. 1 team in the country playing Washington Monday.

The Big Ten's Rose Bowl pact lapsed last year after the old Pacific Coast Conference broke up. The new Big Five indicated its willingness to continue the tie up with the Big Ten, but the Big Ten now is split 5-5 on resumption. Members are free to accept a Rose Bowl invitation or an individual school basis.

MOST QUESTIONABLE DECISION OF YEAR — American League's helter skelter expansion move, allowing two new clubs to become active immediately (1961).

MOST MIXED-UP CLUB OF YEAR — Chicago's Cubs, who traded Manager Charlie Grimm for announcer Lou Boudreau early in the season and contemplated an 8-coach "electoral college" to name a new manager (er, head coach) at year's end.

SHORTEST STORY OF YEAR — Braves' stay in first place (July 24 to July 25).

They'll Do It Every Time

By Jimmy Hatlo

The distance from Kimberly to Little Chute isn't very far — only the width of the Fox River.

But, there is a great difference in the athletic reputations of Kimberly and Little Chute (St John) High Schools. Kimberly High is almost perennially high-rated in state basketball rankings.

In the nine full seasons since Coach Gil Frank arrived on the scene (and Kimberly joined the Mid Eastern Conference) the Papermakers have a 101-29 M.E. won-loss record (.777). The mark includes five league championships or title shares and several state tournament trips.

During that era the Little Chute cage record has been only average. The Chuters' last basketball win over Kimberly was in 1950 in the first game in the Papermakers' present gym.

Equally Impressive

The Little Chute record in football during the same era has been equally impressive. From 1951 through 1960 Little Chute has a 54-14 grid standard (.794). That includes six Fox Valley Catholic Conference titles, three unbeaten seasons and a 6-3 edge over Kimberly.

The populations of the two Fox River Valley villages are similar (just over 5,000) as are the two schools' enrollments (about 300). And, both communities have a large percentage of people of Dutch descent. Many families have relatives in both villages.

Despite all this there has been a marked prevalence of tall, lanky (basketball type) boys in Kimberly. Little Chute has had more of the short, wiry football types.

Many Skyscrapers

Such Kimberly skyscrapers come to mind as Stu Courchaine 6-7, later a Xavier College star; Bob Van Zeeland 6-5 who went on to play at Creighton; Lee Nevers 6-5; Carl VandenBoom 6-4; Tom Anders 6-3; Bob Boots 6-4; Jack Lamers 6-3, now on the Michigan State varsity, and Tom Rooyakkers 6-5 of the current Papermakers.

Five or six members of the present freshman team are already 6-0 or taller. Jim Van Grinsven of the KSH "B" team stands 6-5. To be sure, Kimberly has had some star basketball performers who were "small" men—boys like Terry Lamers 5-10, later a St. Norbert luminary, Don Hearden 5-10, now a University of Wisconsin freshman regular, and Bill Wood 5-10 who starred at Lawrence.

A Few Big Boys

And Little Chute has had a few "Big boys" on its basketball clubs during the past decade—boys like Harland Hietpas 6-3 of last year's team, Roy VandenHeuvel, 6-2 and Gene Hietpas 6-3.

St. John has sent a number of products on to college football, boys like Joe Verbrick, Mike and Dave Kons, Keith Verstegen, and Don Schept to St. Norbert and Bob Van Dinter and Mike Bongers to St. Thomas.

Kimberly Basketball Coach Gil Frank and St. John football and basketball mentor Bill Fitzpatrick agree on one major reason for superior Kimberly basketball. That's the presence in Kimberly of a Kimberly-Clark Corp. clubhouse which includes a gym with two basketball hoops.

The gym is open to the public all day, every day of the year. And it's usually teeming with Kimberly youngsters.

"Basketball is a tradition here," Frank says. "Many of our kids' fathers starred in it. I'll bet there's a hoop on most garages in Kimberly."

Strong Program

"We have a strong grade school program at Holy Name, where Elmer VanderVelden donates his time as coach, and at the public grade school under Jim Koehn.

"I've often wondered why they don't grow taller across the river," smiles Gil. "Mr. Gerritts" (Kimberly Superintendent of Schools) says we must run our kids through the paper machines.

"The Little Chute kids are faster than ours. I'm track coach here and the two best dashmen I've had were, Roger Van Boxtel who went to the state meet, and Dick Williams, a 10.2 boy in the 100." Van Boxtel is from Little Chute and Williams from Combined Locks.

Fitzpatrick, like Frank in his tenth season at his current post, agrees that the clubhouse gym has been a big factor in Kimberly's success. "You don't learn basketball in a couple of hours of daily practice during the season. It's that extra work during the off-season that makes the difference.

A Nice Circle

"Kimberly has a vicious circle — a nice circle for them—going in basketball. The players become good, parents and youngsters come to the games in large numbers and more interest develops."

Bill points out that a similar situation exists in Little Chute football. "Our kids here like contact. Success breeds more practice and more desire on the part of the younger kids."

He points out that during lean moments in Little Chute basketball he often hears "wait till football season." He hates to hear that. His first love was basketball until recent years.

Bill is also Little Chute recreation director. During vacations he's been working with fifth, sixth and seventh graders on cage fundamentals. He's hoping that his village's youngsters have more basketball courts available to them in the future—both outdoors and indoors.

rolled the Packers to 401 yards and still only got 13 points. Isn't that something?

Green Bay was down in these seven times and scored only three occasions—two field goals and a touchdown. That's frustration.

In fact, this kind of a game is heart-splitting, soul-searching — win or lose . . . many little things could have tipped it over to Green Bay.

Five Title Games

It could be boiled down to the experience of the quarterbacks . . Van Brocklin has been in five title games. Starr never came close until this year. In fact, Bart had to win the job over Lamar McHan again this year. Maybe Van's extra experience was that little difference between winning and losing.

Whatever happened, Green Bay had nothing to be ashamed of . . . it was tough to lose—real tough but the Packers had this distinction in defeat. They were swinging away at the end and finally ended up just eight short yards from a victory.

That final drive downfield at the end can be the springboard for the club's defense of their Western Division title in 1961.

Let's drink a toast to the 1960 western champions and their great coach Vince Lombardi.

Celtics Back In Eastern Division Lead

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Boston Celtics were back in sole possession of first place in the Eastern Division of the National Basketball Association today chiefly because of the fine shooting of Cincinnati's Oscar Robertson.

The Celtics downed the New York Knickerbockers 120-106 Friday night. Robertson got into the act by pacing the Cincinnati Royals to 136-130 victory over the Philadelphia Warriors. The two results gave the Celtics a game lead over the Warriors.

Dock Box Holds Your Boat Gear

Stowage Space Saves Owner From Lugging Marine Equipment

BY JOHN BOHANNAN

A dock box is so handy you'll wonder how you got along without it — a perfect place to stow a battery charger, extension cords, canned food, oars, outboard motor, fuel cans, cushions, life jackets, water jug, fishing tackle and dozens of other items.

This handy stowage space will save the owner of a small open boat the chore of lugging a lot of gear back and forth in his car.

A dock box must be sturdy, waterproof, securely fastened to the dock, and capable of being locked.

Exterior grade fir plywood saves time in building, since the top, sides and ends are each one piece. Its laminations give it strength, reducing the amount of framing required.

Use half-inch plywood for the panels. Frames can be ripped from two-by-four straight-grain fir.

Draw Own Plans

Draw up your own plans for the size and shape you want, remembering that you'll save money by cutting out of standard-size plywood panels without waste.

An excellent shape is to have the box one foot, nine inches wide; one, foot, eight inches high, and about eight feet long.

The top will be the widest panel, since it must lap everything for weather protection. The bottom is one inch narrower so it can be lapped by the sides. Ends, which set in, will be the same width as the bottom and a half-inch lower than the sides to allow for bottom thickness.

Rip the two-by-fours through the center of the wide measure to provide frames finishing an inch and a half square cross section to be used as center cross braces in the box, as hinge stringers, and as risers under the bottom to keep the box high and dry above the wet dock.

Rip some of the square stock again to provide diagonal vertical corner braces inside the box.

Cross Braces

Inside cross braces should be at the center, across the bottom and across the top. These will give rigidity to the long sides, and beef up the top so it won't sag under the weight of folks who are always sitting on it (whether you're there or not.)

A top-opening box is the handiest kind to use, but more care must be exercised in avoiding leaks. By attaching the cross-brace to the top as shown in the photo, the entire length is left free for stowing oars and long items. The reinforcing pieces on the under side of the top are somewhat less than one by four, also ripped from the two-by-fours.

Side opening boxes can be provided with two doors, hinged at either the top or bottom, and closing against jam frames made of plywood and lapped inside the sides to extend about five-eights of an inch beyond the openings all around as a weather stop.

Steel Hinges

Use two-inch steel hinges — four for a full length opening top, and two each for double side doors. Hinges must be countersunk in stringers attached to the box to provide sufficient strength.

Waterproofing can be improved by making the top large enough to provide an overlap all around with vertical flaps to carry off the water.

Since the top takes the most beating from the weather, you may want to extend its life by fiber-glassing it before painting. Or it can be covered with neoprene such as Seaprene. If you have the time and inclination, you might even coat the entire box on the outside with a plastic.

The box is first assembled by gluing the pieces together, using a waterproof casein glue such as Weldwood or Elmer's and clamping until dry. Fastenings, either non-rusting nails or screws, can be put in after the glue sets up.

Pair of Tackles are Signed by 49er '11'

SAN FRANCISCO —(P— Two tackles were signed Friday by the San Francisco 49ers of the National Football League.

They are Bob McCreary, Wake Forest, and Tom Jewell, Idaho State. McCreary, who stands 6 feet 5 and who weighs 250 pounds, was the 49ers fifth choice at the recent NFL draft in Philadelphia.

Jewell, 6 feet 3 and 245 pounds, was drafted 17th.

Out of the North came Dave Huempfner, Green Bay, with this whopper Northern Pike. The fish weighed 30 pounds and appeared to have near-record proportions. However, a look at the record books showed that a 38-pound Northern holds the state record for Wisconsin waters. Huempfner took the big Northern while fishing through the ice in Marinette County.

1960 Interesting For Naturalists

BY CLARA HUSSONG

GREEN BAY — While listening to and watching my favorite local TV weather forecaster recently, I thought of a good headline for this week's column, but I had to give it up because it didn't fit the space. My dreamed-up headline: "It's Been a Short Winter — From Last Blossoms to First Pussy Willows."

Hussong

The aforementioned weatherman appeared with a bouquet of pussy willows in his arms. He missed a good opening line by not announcing: "Well, it's been a short winter." Dandelions and some garden flowers were seen as late as Dec. 5 or 6, and now, three weeks later, here are pussy willows.

Bcause their hobby depends a good deal on the weather, naturalists are always interested in this subject.

Summarizing the year 1960 briefly, and I must admit, from memory, it was a somewhat cool, wet year. There wasn't too much snow in the early months of the year; the spring season was almost a month behind schedule; summer continued moist and cool —and we haven't forgotten those mosquitoes—; early autumn was disappointing, but the late fall weather made up for it. The autumn coloring was good, average in most of the state, but better than average in other parts.

Winter Birds

Winter birds at feeders were, on the whole, fewer in number than in that wonderful winter season of 1958-59, when we had all that snow, all those grosbeaks and purple finches. So far this winter, birds are somewhat slow in coming to feeders.

The spring migration was slow, and many birds lost their lives during periods of snowstorms along migratory routes. Bluebirds, martins and tree swallows were among the species which, suffered most.

To make up for the disappointments, there were some good bird records for the state. Several new species were added to the state's list.

In the summer of 1959 the black-throated or desert sparrow was seen just below the state line south of Beloit. In late December and early January (a year ago) a black-throated sparrow came to a feeder in Madison. Dozens of birders saw it, and it was photographed, so, no doubt, it will become No. 331 in the state's present list of birds.

Like Junco

This western bird looks more like a junco than a sparrow, but we must remember that the junco is a sparrow. The black-throated sparrow is between the chipping and song sparrow in size. It is dark gray above, and white below, with a black throat patch coming down to a point. White "eyebrows," and a white-edged tail — like the junco's — are other distinguishing marks.

Known also as desert sparrow, this species' common breeding grounds are the arid and desert regions of Texas, Arizona, California, and other southwestern states. Its winter home is supposed to be in the southern parts of that region, and what it was doing in the north, no one knows.

Ray has a good movie shot of this bird taken in southern Texas in the spring of 1958.

Cattle Egret

Another new bird seen in the state for the first time this year is the cattle egret, a native of Africa. Years ago it was reported in the islands of the South Atlantic, and later in South and Central America, the West Indies, and now it is known to breed in Florida. In recent years it has been seen in many new places in both the eastern and western hemispheres, including various parts of the United States.

In a note included in a Christmas card received by Mrs. Andrew Weber of Green Bay, J. Harwood Evans reports that he saw one of these birds near Janesville in June 1960 In October it was seen and photographed at Horicon marsh. Evans was long-time treasurer of the Wisconsin Society for Ornithology and former president of the group.

This may be a snowy owl winter, acording to observations made by local birders, and also by reports from other parts of the state. This arctic bird occurs here as a winter resident rarely some years, and commonly in others.

It may also be a crossbill year, Ed Paulson, another local birder learned from a northern Michigan bird bander. She reported that 964 red crossbills had been banded near Marquette, Mich., since early fall.

Two Men Appointed To Game Committees

Appointments of Earl Bruhn of Wauwatosa to the big game advisory committee of the Wisconsin Conservation Commission and Orville Olson of Baldwin to the Upland Game Committee have been announced here. The big game committee is surrounded with considerable public attention for its work in studying deer yard conditions and making recommendations to the commission on deer management.

Big Second Half Brings Viking Victory

by coining seven of the Bluejays' 18 field goals.

Despite leading (narrowly) for 14-15 minutes of the first half, Lawrence was held in reasonably good check by Elmhurst's zone defense. The Bluejays' slow-break offense clicked for eight points in the final three minutes of the first half to produce a 29-28 lead.

Increase Pressure

In the second half, the business-like Vikes put considerably more defensive pressure on the invaders. The Bluejays were able to sink only one of their first 13 field shots and didn't connect for their second basket of the half until 12½ minutes had gone by.

The Vikes, meanwhile, peppered in nine of their first 16 floor shots of the second half. This unerring markmanship, plus Lawrence's time-consuming possession ball forced Elmhurst out of its zone for the last eight minutes of the game.

Lawrence extended its margin to 15 points (50-35) with 8 05 remaining. Luzietti led an Elmhurst counter-offensive that shaved seven points off that lead (51-43) in the ensuing three minutes.

The Vikes, however, refused to become unglued and fattened their lead to 14 points (57-43) on Rasmussen's 15-footer, Lamers' tip-in and Lamers' 15-footer.

White Ties Game

For the game, Lawrence shot goals at a 40.4 per cent accuracy ...e (23 for 57), while Elmhurst had to settle for 30 per cent (18 for 60).

Ripon's Bruce White sent the opener into overtime with a game-typing (76-76) basket in the final 17 seconds. White also scored the first extra-session goal as the Redmen led the rest of the way.

Dick Papke and Mike Mullen (with 17 points apiece) were high among Ripon's five double-figure scorers who offset a robust 2-man scoring punch Lake Forest's Phil Sokody and Tom Lewis acounted for 34 and 26 points, respectively

'Come as You Are'

Style of Dress Not Important Ski Item

BY TOM TORINUS
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

Skiers have an open invitation to come to the hill in any dress they desire, pay their tow fees, and live it up on the slopes. They interpret this invitation in many ways and come in all kinds of get-ups.

Some regard skiing as a "come as you are" sport; some seem to think it's a black tie dinner. Most dress as if it is some kind of semi-formal affair.

No mode of dress is right. Skiers chose their togs to express their individuality and add to their enjoyment of the sport. The variety of outfits lends color and interest to an area's atmosphere.

Few Rules

But there are a few rules for ski dress. Outfits should be made up of several layers of clothing rather than of one heavy outer garment. Then, as the air temperature and the skier's body temperature change, he can peel off or put on a layer and stay comfortable.

Clothes should fit well enough and be roomy enough to allow free movement of limbs. A waterproof garment will shut out much wet, cold misery on days when snow is falling and on the days of slush-skiing that sometimes occur during spring.

At areas with rope tows operators prohibit loose outer garments that wind around the rope as it twists and leave the rider dangling. Heavy leather gloves or mitts are advisable for rope tow riders.

Anything Goes

When these requirements have been seen to, the imagination takes over. Anything goes.

The "come as you are" group includes ski bums, snow bunnies, those who don't care about the new fashion trend on the ski hill, those who can't afford it, those who hate it — and just plain characters. They wear blue jeans, bib overalls, army fatigues, deer hunting outfits, business suits and raccoon coats.

The black tie or high fashion skiers follow ever changing ski styles closely and buy frequently. They are donning more stretch and more fur. Almost anything can now be bought in stretch material. Fur parkas from little known and well known animals which bear handsome price tags are fashionable. Colors in some of the high-priced lines are unusual and even shocking. Many patterns are disorganized.

Average Costume

The more average costume is typically a lively thing. An infinite variety of colors, patterns and materials in ski pants, sweaters, parkas and hats and an interest in the untraditional among skiers lets them clothe themselves in almost any way they want. Stretch pants in bright colors swarm over the slopes and even knickers are popular. Import sweaters of almost every color and design can be seen on the hills. Zany hats sit on the back of many skiers' heads. There is little social criticism of the most unusual dress. Many of the items in a ski wardrobe can be seen off-season participating in many other sporting events, to which they are well suited.

Terrors Win, 76-62, Over Neenah Quintet

in 17 tries in the frame and only a sharp 10 for 13 from the free throw stripe kept them from letting the Terrors slip completely out of reach.

The Rockets scored the first five markers of the last quarter, four by sophomore Dick Kuehl, for a 54-48 score. With 7 16 left, Tom Lomigro connected for Appleton and at the 6 24 juncture, Felton scored twice from the gratis line for Neenah and the 56-50 tally.

But then the dike broke for the Rockets and at the stretch from 3 30 to 1 30 left to play, Appleton hooped 11 of 13 points.

Sharp Free Throwing

The Terrors were consistent in their quarterly output making 18 in each of the first three and 22 in the fourth. Both teams did well from the free throw line, Appleton going 18 for 26, including 8 for 9 in the second quarter, and Neenah, a final 22 for 32

Treiber garnered Appleton scoring honors with 22 points. He was consistent all evening, getting three goals in the first period and two in each of the next three Schultz added 19 points plus playing a fine floor game. He blocked a number of Neenah field goal tries.

Felton Scores 22

Neenah's Felton hit his average, garnering 22 points to tie Treiber for game honors. He made seven baskets and eight free throws in nine attempts Felton hit 14 points in the first half, was blanked in the third quarter and closed with a basket and six free throws in the fourth.

Doug Ankerson drilled home three long fielders in the first half and finished with 13 points Kuehl added 10

Coach Dick Emanuel was forced to go to his bench when Dick Rankin picked up three fouls in the first period and Jeff Martin collected four in the first three minutes of the third. Gendron, filled in ably for Rankin and scored 10 points and Lomigro, subbing for Martin, added six.

The unofficial shooting statistics show Appleton with 38 per cent accuracy on 29 for 76 and Neenah with a colder 26 per cent on 20 for 78

BOTH BARRELS by Jay Reed

Cleaning the cuff on New Year's Eve.

There are several ways of looking at it but, actually, 1960 wasn't a bad year for the hunting-fishing fraternity. Duck shooters had all the best of it, for instance, and pheasant hunting, while far short of perfect, was better than in some recent years. Deer gunners had a tough year, for the most part, and we haven't heard the last of that particular season. Most upland bird shooting was poor but then who expected it to be good?

—000—

Fishermen fared better than hunters Lake Winnebago produced walleyes and perch in good number during the summer and there were few complaints over winter angler conditions The upriver pike run on the Wolf was the best in recent years but the downriver run was something else again Trout fishermen did fairly well in most instances. Generally speaking, if a man wanted to wet a line he could usually expect to make some sort of catch.

What about 1961? It's too early to predict what the new year will hold for outdoorsmen. There is certain to be a back-alley dog fight-type of dispute over how our next deer season should be run. Party permits are about as welcome in the state as the seven-year itch but there will be a determined bid by game officials to have the law in effect again next November in some form or other.

More restrictions on duck hunting appear in the offing in spite of the good year Wisconsin shooters had Some changes, too, probably will be made in the Horicon goose hunting regulations

Fishermen might expect at least as good or even better conditions than they found in 1960. This depends on many things, of course, but the outlook at the moment is bright.

Resolutions, like records, are made to be broken but this is going to be an off year for me — no resolutions There are a couple of things I'd like to do during 1961. I'd like to return to Canada for another crack at an Ontario moose. I want to squat again by a campfire in the gathering Canadian dusk and eat walleye fillets and thick slabs of buttered bread I want to swap stories with my French-Canadian friend Mo Rioux and I want to watch the outdoor artistry of Guide Colin Macmillan.

And, good or bad, I want to take part in every hunting and fishing season the state of Wisconsin provides. But if fate should have it planned another way I'll be thankful for the hunts I've had — for the animals I've seen over the sights of a gun and the fish I've caught. And I'll be thankful, too, for the trail I've been permitted to follow this far with my beloved Brunette.

From both of us, happy new year.

Medical Society Urges Meetings On Aged Care

Oppose Federal Old Age Programs Aimed At by Democrats

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — With an eye upon the impending Democratic national administration in Washington and its aims, the State Medical Society of Wisconsin today urged its county societies to set up special committees on medical care for the aging to "deal with the critical problems that will confront medicine on this subject."

Organized medicine in Wisconsin, as elsewhere in the country, has opposed the provision of medical care through the federal old age and survivors insurance program, which is expected to be one of the immediate goals of the new Democratic national administration and congressional majority.

The society supported the legislation in the preceding Congress which provided the machinery for a state care for the aged program, with federal financial assistance. There is yet no state plan in effect, or proposed.

Suggests Meetings

The call for the special action committees of the county societies came from Dr. E. D. Sorenson, society president.

"It is particularly desirous and necessary that physicians become interested and active in organizing community meetings to discuss the problems of the aging, along the lines that medicine believes in, namely, free choice of physicians," he wrote in the society organ published here.

Medicine believes in the best care possible, he added, that the profession must take the initiative in dealing with the problems of the aging.

"If we ignore our opportunities to promote the general welfare of our growing geriatric problems," he warned, "the social atmosphere may become so strong that we shall never be able to stomach it."

Clouds, Cold Weather Due To Continue

Clouds and cold weather continue to blanket most of Wisconsin today, although light snow or drizzle was falling along Lake Michigan and the Hurley area received three inches of new snow.

The Upper Great Lakes area was cloud covered. Upper Michigan will have cold weather with snow changing to snow flurries. Skiers planning the trek to Upper Michigan may run into locally heavy snow flurries near the lakes.

Snow flurries in the northern Rockies changed to rain along the Washington coast. Generally fair weather prevailed elsewhere.

Temperatures ranged from near zero along the Canadian border to the 60s and 70s in Florida. The eastern sections of the country were generally in the 20s from the Ohio Valley and lower lakes into the northeast.

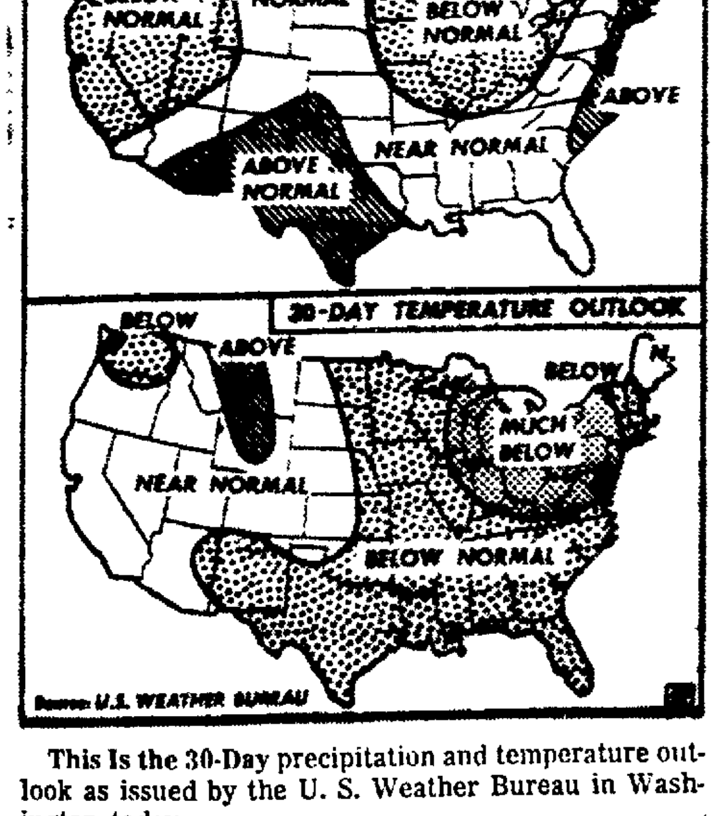

Mostly cloudy skies were forecast for the eastern half of the country during the day with light snow or snow flurries in portions of the Northern plains to the Upper Great Lakes, the northern Appalachians and northern New England. Occasional rain or drizzle was expected in the central and southern Mississippi Valley and Tennessee.

Fair weather was forecast for the east and west coast with the exception of some light showers in the northwest.

Temperatures were expected to drop somewhat in the northeastern and central plains and the Upper Great Lakes while a little warmer weather is expected in the southern Rockies and southwest. Little change is expected elsewhere.

The POWER of FAITH

by Howard Brodie

AP Newsfeatures

"Ring out the old, ring in the new . . ."
"Ring out the false, ring in the true"

The Spirit of New Year is manifest in these lines by the great poet, Alfred Lord Tennyson, who believed: "Different language does not always imply different opinions, nor different opinions any difference in real faith . . . On God and God-like men we build our trust . . . The love of God is the true basis of duty, truth, reverence, loyalty, love, virtue and work . . . I should infinitely rather feel myself the most miserable wretch on the face of the earth with a God above, than the highest type of man standing alone . . . Closer is He than breathing and nearer than hands and feet . . . That God which ever lives and loves."

Joe Blamed For Defeat of Philleo Nash

Democrats Claim Alleged Link to Reds Damaging

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — The official publicity organ of the Wisconsin Democratic party organization today told organization Democrats that Lt Gov Philleo Nash, defeated in the November election, was a belated casualty of McCarthyism".

The publication of the Democratic state committee referred to the fact that Nash during the last year has been the target of a Milwaukee group that accused him of earlier association with left-wing causes.

The party paper called the charges "long discredited," and described them as the work of a "group of juvenile cranks." But it also complained that "not once did any responsible Republican spokesman in Wisconsin denounce the circulation of thousands of pink sheets linking Nash to communism."

The publication also flatly declared that Nash is in line for a Kennedy administration appointment." He has said that he wants an appointment in the U. S department of interior.

The Wisconsin Rapids cranberry producer won his state office in 1958 in a close margin over Lt. Gov Warren P. Knowles, veteran Republican.

This year Knowles ran again and defeated Nash by about 60 000 votes in an election that saw other Republican statehouse candidates increase their vote support, and replaced another Democratic state officer, Treasurer Eugene Lamb, with Mrs. Dena Smith, Republican.

News of Religion

Peace, Turmoil Mark 1960 Religious World

BY JULES LOH

In the realm of religion, mark down the year 1960 as a paradox of turmoil and tranquility.

This was the year of "the religious issue," and beneath the serious debate were manifestations of intolerance and bigotry. It also was the year Christianity visited Rome, and overshadowing the official courtesies was an unprecedented air of dialogue and unity.

It was the year that gave birth to a new phrase: "kneel-in demonstration"; and the year that produced the first Negro cardinal.

It was the year swastikas and anti-Jewish slogans defaced synagogues and public buildings, and the year rabbis preached sermons in 400 Methodist churches by invitation.

It also was a year of personal accomplishment.

John F Kennedy buried the notion a Roman Catholic could not be elected president of the United States. There also were other names that made news; some of them familiar, others in the headlines for the first time:

Eugene Carson Blake, stated clerk of the United Presbyterian Church of the U.S.A., who proposed a merger of Methodists, Episcopalians, Presbyterians and members of the United Church of Christ.

Billy Graham, who added a sixth continent to his worldwide evangelizing crusade with a 10-nation "Safari for Souls" in Africa.

Archbishop Gunnar Hultgen, primate of Sweden's Lutheran Church who abandoned tradition and ordained three women ministers.

Kneel-in Demonstrations

Aloysius Cardinal Stepinac of Yugoslavia, whose death cried out against Communist injustices as eloquently as the prelate had in life.

Lonnie King, 23 year-old Morehouse College student who led the first kneel-in demonstrations in six Atlanta churches.

W. F. Albright, senior editor of a group of Protestant, Catholic and Jewish scholars who began working together to translate from original manuscripts a Bible acceptable to all.

Bishop Maurice Schexnayder of Lafayette, La., who announced he would deny Catholic burial rites to any of his flock guilty of criminal negligence in automobile accidents.

James W. Wine, Presbyterian lawyer employed by John F Kennedy to answer questions of religion in the presidential campaign.

Historic Meeting

But no names produced more startling religious news in 1960 than those of Angelo Giuseppe Roncalli, Pope John XIII, and Geoffrey Francis Fisher, archbishop of Canterbury.

Their Dec 2 meeting in the Vatican was the first time the heads of the two ancient churches had sat down together in 500 years, and marked the high point of a year sprinkled with other expressions of growing cordiality in the Christian community.

Earlier in the year the Pope appointed 11 cardinals to head advance work commissions for his forthcoming ecumenical council.

One of the posts went to Augustin Cardinal Bea, a German-born Jesuit whose job it will be to keep non-Catholic Christian groups informed of the council's work. The cardinal described himself as "general liaison officer."

Church Unity Discussed

Also in 1960 leaders of 171 Protestant, Eastern Orthodox and Anglican churches gathered in St. Andrews, Scotland, for the 11th annual meeting of the World Council of Churches.

Their chief topic was church unity, and among other moves they drew up a code of behavior which would prohibit proselytizing one another's members. The code awaits final approval at the 1961 meeting in New Delhi.

What threatened to be the most divisive episode of 1960—the religious issue in the presidential campaign—may result in more understanding between Catholics and Protestants. A post-election survey of church leaders showed most felt the campaign-inspired discussions provided a foothold for further conversation which inevitably will lead to better understanding between the two groups.
